Red Sox Advantage Is Wiped Out When Lisenbee Weakens.

MARBERRY POUNDED FOR 3 RUNS IN 4TH

Todt Regains Lead Again by Homer in Fifth After Nats Tie Score.

By FRANK H. YOUNG
(Staff Correspondent of The Post).

Fenway Park, Boston, Mass., July 8. The Nationals kept up their winning ways today and, by beating the Red Sox, 6 to 5, retained their place at the top of the American League ladder and gained a few points on the Mackmen, who split a double-header with the Yankees in New York. The Nats also extended their winning streak to nine games, reaching this total of straight successes after having been stopped at eight on two occasions earlier in the season.

It was not a walkover, as the score indicates, and but for two breaks, one in the form of an error and the other when Rice's looper in the fifth was lost in the sun, the Red Sox would have won, for all of their five runs were earned. Three home runs were packed into the afternoon's play, Phil Todt and Earl Webb getting them for the home team, while Heinie Manush contributed one for the Nats. This latter blow was bigger than the other two combined, however, for it not only came with Rice on base, but it proved to be the wallop which gave the Nationals their winning margin.

Also Hits Two Singles.

Manush also cracked out two singles to lead the Johnsonian attack, while Webb, with an identical record, was high gun for the natives.

Fred Marberry and Horace Lisenbee, the latter a former Washington flinger, pitched for their respective teams, with the big Texan getting credit for his fifth straight victory. He granted nine hits and was in hot water only once, in round four, when the Sox scored thrice on four successive hard-hit drives. "Lizzie" found the going a trifle rough and was eased out via the pinch-hitter route in the seventh, giving way to George Smith.

At the end of the first half of the game the teams were deadlocked at 3-all, the Nationals having garnered their tallies in as many different innings, while the Red Sox had hopped on Marberry's slants opening their fourth for a cluster, the result of four successive hits, two of which were extra-basers.

Run Follows Rhyne's Error.

Rhyne's error on Rice's roller, a poor throw to first, following a good stop, started the Nats off in the first, which netted a run when Manush followed with a single and Cronin then poled out a sacrifice fly to deep center. In the third, opening singles by Marberry and Myer, Rice's intended sacrifice, on which all hands were safe when the throw to force Marberry at third was late, and a second sacrifice fly by Cronin accounted for another run.

The third Washington run was what might be called a "gift from the gods," for Webb was set to catch an easy looper off Rice's bat, when he suddenly lost it in the sun and it went as a triple. Manush immediately let the Nats take advantage of this break by singling his mate home.

Meanwhile, Marberry, after granting two unused singles in the first, had no troubles until the fourth,

Farmer Shot Dead Fleeing Dry Raid

Father of Kentucky Youth Swears Out Warrant Charging Murder.

London, Ky., July 8 (A.P.).—Homer Mackey, a 25-year-old farmer, was killed near here today in a raid on his farm led by Guy Tuggle, a Federal prohibition agent.

Mackey was said to have fled when he saw the officers and to have been shot by Frank B. Helton, a constable. Helton, Tuggle and Robert Selvy, of London, composed the raiding party which went from here. The farm is in Knox County.

It was reported here that no whisky was found on the place, but that the officers found half a pint in Mackey's pocket. Joseph Mackey, father of the slain man, swore out a warrant charging murder.

REPRESENTATIVE FLORIAN LAMPERT.

FLORIAN LAMPERT HURT IN COLLISION

INJURED ON HIS BIRTHDAY

Chicago, July 8 (A.P.).—Representative Florian Lampert, of Wisconsin, suffered a broken collar bone and other injuries today when the automobile in which he was returning from Washington to his home in Oshkosh, Wis., was in collision with a coal truck in Chicago Heights.

Today was Representative Lampert's sixty-seventh birthday. He was taken to St. James Hospital in Chicago Heights for an X-ray examination. Hospital attaches said it was unlikely the it would prove fatal.

The accident occurred as Mr. Lampert was being driven into Chicago Heights by Charles P. Nolan, a student at Georgetown University. Rain had made the pavement slippery. One of the two vehicles in the collision skidded and the crash followed.

Nolan said he was shaken and bruised in the crash, but that his injuries were minor. He immediately telegraphed to Mrs. Lampert in Washington and said that she was on her way to her husband's bedside.

Representative Lampert represents the Sixth Congressional District of Wisconsin. He has been in Congress since 1916. He is a Republican.

Mother of Five Slain By Suitor She Spurned

Chicago, July 8 (A.P.).—Mrs. Bessie Lahey, 38, mother of five young children, was shot to death by a rejected suitor today while she slept with three of her offspring. Her slayer, Alfred Geisler, 42, then killed himself. Mrs. Larey was divorced.

Geisler's sister, with whom Mrs. Lahey lived, said her brother entered the house and went directly to Mrs. Lahey's bedroom, shooting her twice in the heart. The sister said Mrs. Lahey had refused his repeated proposals, saying she did not wish to burden any one with her children. Geisler had been a widower two years.

RIVER PROJECT IS REFUSED BY POWER BOARD

POTOMAC KEPT FREE FROM DEVELOPMENT

South Branch, Quick and Stineman Offers Are Also Spurned.

MEMORIAL PARKWAY BILL BLOCKS PLANS

Other Concerns Are Also Rejected by Body in Session.

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

The application of the Byllesby Corporation, giant power concern of Chicago, for a preliminary permit to harness the waters of the Potomac at Chain Bridge and Great Falls and thus develop cheap electric power, has been "rejected without prejudice" by the Federal Power Commission, it was learned yesterday.

The application had been pending for three years. In that time, the Byllesby group, under the direction of Gen. Charles Keller, who once was Engineer Commissioner here, spent thousands of dollars on surveys and other preliminaries. Ultimately it planned to sink $60,000,000 into the project.

In rejecting the application of the Byllesby Corporation, the Federal Power Commission also turned down two other applicants the South Branch Power Co. and Albert M. Quick and W. H. H. Stineman.

Hand Was Forced.

In view of the resolution adopted by Congress more than a year ago and in view of the provision written into the recently enacted Capper-Cramton park act, the Federal Power Commission could hardly have done otherwise—that is, unless it decided to allow the applications to continue gathering dust.

So far as the Potomac River is concerned, Congress has the hands of the commission securely tied.

The Capper-Cramton act, which provides for a beautiful George Washington Memorial Parkway along both sides of the Potomac from Mount Vernon and Fort Washington to Great Falls, contains a clause which states specifically that there shall be no water power development in the Potomac unless such development is authorized by Congress.

Bonner Gives Explanation.

F. E. Bonner, executive secretary of the Power Commission, explained this in a letter to the unsuccessful applicants, and added:

"As the project for the parkway will occupy in part the area included in the project covered by your application for a preliminary permit, your application is rejected without prejudice to the filing of a new application not in conflict with the parkway or for a project for which congressional authority can be shown."

This would seem to put an end to the movement for harnessing the Potomac, at least, for the time being. It doesn't, however, judging from a statement made yesterday by Elisha Hanson, attorney for the Potomac River Corporation, a subsidiary of the Byllesby Corporation.

"We have not abandoned the project by any means," said Mr. Hanson. "We expect to go right ahead, but I am not yet prepared to say what our next move will be."

Heavy Task Is Ahead.

Conditions being what they are, with the Federal Power Commission impotent so far as the Potomac is

Calvin Coolidge

Says: It would certainly be fair and probably wise to defer judgment on the reported actions of the Federal Farm Board until the results are fully matured and they are in a position to reveal what they have done and why they did it. This board is so well supplied with hard headed business experience that they are entitled to the presumption of having used the best judgment possible in executing the law under existing conditions. The reported use of public money in a direct attempt to steady the marked may turn out to have been justified. It did not prevent a decline in cotton and wheat but it may have lessened it. Possibly it will make a bad matter worse. Buying to steady the market with the expectation of a loss, however, can scarcely be termed speculation, which is trading with the expectation of a profit. But there is one possibility that may turn out to be all important. If, at the very outset of its cacreer, the action of the farm board demonstrates to the country that even the United States Treasury can not maintain a fixed price for farm produce, while the lesson may be expensive, it will be worth all it costs. We shall learn through experience that that kind of farm relief will not work.

POLICE DEPARTMENT RAISES 55 IN RANK

Promotions Are Made Under Provisions of Recent District Bill.

LETTERMAN GETS BOOST

Fifty-five officers and privates in the Police Department were promoted by the District Commissioners yesterday on recommendation of Maj. Henry G. Pratt, superintendent of police.

The promotions were provided for by Congress in the District appropriation bill for the current fiscal year, and the principal feature was an increase in the number of police lieutenants, to provide three commissioned officers instead of two for each of the fourteen precincts and the Detective Bureau.

Some of the promotions had been forecast, including that of Lieut. L. I. H. Edwards, personnel officer at Police Headquarters, to be captain and retained on duty at headquarters, and Lieut. Benjamin A. Lamb, of the Traffic Bureau, to be captain and retained on duty at the Traffic Bureau.

Several detective sergeants who have been in the Detective Bureau for years and have become known for their work were among the men made lieutenants.

Considerable interest attached to the promotion of Sergt. Oscar J. Letterman to lieutenant. Sergt. Letterman has been head of the vice and liquor squad for some time past and in that capacity often achieved notoriety for various things done on raids made under his command. There were protests against his promotion, but careful investigation of these failed to disclose, it was said, anything which might be considered as adequate explanation for passing over the sergeant, who stood high on the civil service list.

Sergt. Letterman will be relieved of duty as head of the liquor squad and assigned to duty as lieutenant in the Sixth Precinct. While serving as commander of the liquor squad he has been officially assigned to the First Precinct station, although operating

MISSING DEBUTANTE HUNTED AS ELOPER

SEEN IN STRANGER'S CAR

Washington police last night disclosed that Mary Frances McClenny, Richmond, Va., debutante, who has been missing from her home there for a week, is being sought here at the request of the Virginia authorities for "larceny."

At first believed to have been the victim in a sensational abduction, Miss McClenny now is thought to have eloped, for in their telegram to detective headquarters here the Richmond police declared that she might apply for a marriage license here.

No details of the "larceny" were contained in the wire, the message simply requesting the aid of the department here in locating the girl. A nationally known detective agency has been employed by Miss McClenny's father to assist in learning her whereabouts.

Richmond, Va., July 8 (A.P.).—Nothing but clews developed tonight for detectives in a baffling search for Mary Frances McClenny, 20-year-old Richmond society girl, who disappeared from her Hampton Gardens home here a week ago.

Private detectives working alone on the case said they were trailing a suspect.

The detectives said the Rev. Philip Nathans, a neighbor of the McClenny family had furnished them with a part of the license number on the automobile that drove away with the girl last Tuesday evening about dusk.

The Rev. Mr. Nathans said he saw Miss McClenny in her automobile in the neighborhood. Soon after noticing her, he said he saw another smaller car drive up; a man got out, went to Miss McClennys car, and she went with him back to his car, and they both drove off.

Since then neither her parents, Dr. and Mrs. D. C. McClenny, nor neighbors have seen the girl.

Her own car was left abandoned on the street.

Marine Corps Head and Hero of Two Wars Dies of Heart Disease.

(Associated Press.)

A veteran of two wars, two punitive expeditions and a rebellion, Maj. Gen. Wendell C. Neville, 60, commandant of the Marine Corps, died yesterday of heart disease.

The sturdy heart that carried him through the World War, the Spanish-American War and other militant episodes and brought him countless honors and decorations finally failed at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John P. W. Vest, at Edgewater Beach, Md.

Gen. Neville had been in ill health for several months, since he suffered a stroke and spent a few weeks in the Naval Hospital. He returned to duty, and last Thursday went on leave to recuperate further before continuing with his arduous work as head of the Marine Corps. With his death Brig. Gen. Smedley D. Butler became the ranking officer in the Marine Corps. Brig. Gen. Ben H. Fuller, assistant commandant, immediately was appointed acting commandant of the corps.

Gen. Neville's war experience began with the battles of Guantanamo and Cuzco in the Spanish-American conflict. He was appointed a captain for conspicuous conduct in the Guantanamo encounter. Then the Philippine insurrection broke out, and

MAJ. GEN. W. C. NEVILLE.

Neville started for the Pacific islands, but was diverted to China and served for three months in the Boxer rebellion.

As a major he went to Cuba with the army of pacification in 1906 and in 1914 commanded the Second Regiment when that famous group participated in the seizure and occupation of Vera Cruz.

For nearly two years he commanded the Marine detachment at Peking and in December of 1917 he sailed for

SENATE FIGHT FOR NAVY PACT DATA SHARPER

TREATY'S UPHOLDERS, VOTE NEAR, SIDESTEP

Demand for Documents Up Again Today, and May Carry.

SECRETARY STIMSON PRESENT AT SESSION

Senator Swanson Praised by Cabinet Head and by Allen, After Speech.

By ALBERT W. FOX.

Despite the presence of Secretary Stimson on the floor of the Senate and his guidance in directing the administration leaders in the battle over the secret documents issue, the demand for the forbidden documents gained such headway yesterday that a timely adjournment was necessary to save the treaty supporters from apparent defeat.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader, rescued the situation by offering an amendment to the McKellar resolution when the roll call on the resolution was about to begin. This amendment adds the language "if not incompatible with the public interests," to the resolution calling upon the President for the secret documents

Senator Borah, chairman of the foreign relations committee, had previously said that this qualifying language was customary, but had added that he would vote for the McKellar resolution in any event.

Japanese Agreement Alleged.

The debate over the secret documents had brought about a situation where senators on both sides of the chamber were falling in line with the resolution, especially after Senator Hiram Johnson had read semiofficial Japanese reports and other data purporting to uncover a secret gentlemen's agreement between members of the Japanese and American delegations under the terms of which America would have the right to build eighteen big cruisers, in order to appease American public opinion and the United States Senate, but would actually build only 15.

Senator Reed, who was responsible for the special cruiser agreement between Japan and the United States, vigorously denied any such secret agreement and his denial was accepted by Senator Johnson as conclusive. But Senator Johnson maintained that the Japanese believed that such a secret agreement had been entered into and he called attention to the fact that the various reports concerning the alleged plan to cut American cruisers from 18 to 15 had actually been carried out at London and written into the pact. The curtailment of American cruiser strength applies to the life of the treaty and the three additional cruisers may be constructed later.

Reed Accepts Blame.

In view of the similarity between the inspired reports concerning a secret agreement and what actually transpired, Mr. Johnson asked Senator Reed if the Japanese had not moved to bring this situation about.

Mr. Reed replied categorically that the move to curtail America's cruiser strength during the life of the treaty was made by him and not by the Japanese. This ended discussion of this particular phase of the treaty. Senator Johnson made it clear that he accepted Senator Reed's disclaimers without reservation and no at-

Party Leaders Predict Chairman Will Quit at Meeting Tomorrow.

OPPONENTS IN HOUSE LEAD OUSTER BATTLE

Republican Executive Group May Be Summoned to Force Resignation.

Speculation as to whether or not Claudius Huston would resign shortly as chairman of the Republican national committee was renewed last night with a report from Rutland, Vt., that Earl S. Kinsley, national committeeman, had said that President Hoover had asked him to become acting chairman of the party group. This announcement was almost immediately met with a brief statement from the White House that the President had not discussed the matter with Mr. Kinsley.

The story of the Vermont national committeeman's declaration was carried by the Associated Press from the Rutland Herald. The offer was said to include the "possibility of permanent appointment."

Mr. Kinsley was quoted as saying that he was to give President Hoover his decision following the meeting of party officers tomorrow. He gave as his reasons for hesitating to accept the appointment business interests and the necessity of taking up a permanent residence in the National Capital.

Intimate Coolidge Friend.

Besides serving sixteen years on the Republican committee, Mr. Kinsley is a close personal friend of Calvin Coolidge and of the former national committee chairman, Dr. Hubert Work.

A terse statement from the White House said regarding the report: "The President has had no communication with Mr. Kinsley whatsoever."

The Vermont committeeman is not unacquainted with Washington, as at the age of twelve he became a messenger boy for the Senate, a job he held for five years. He is now 60 years old.

Returning to Vermont at the age of 17 to become official reporter for the State Senate, he was ten years later appointed chief of staff with the rank of colonel by Gov. F. D. Proctor. Two years later Rutland elected him State representative, but he served only one term.

Huston Out of City.

He was a member of the Republican State committee from 1907 to 1914 and in 1916 he was a presidential elector. Since 1894 he has been an insurance agent. He is married and has two children.

Chairman Huston, who had attempted to spike growing rumors by announcing Monday that he had no intention of resigning for the present, was out of the city yesterday. Mr. Kinsley was en route to New York and Washington.

Contradictory rumors continued in Capital political circles yesterday as some party leaders predicted that Mr. Huston might be forced to resign at tomorrow's meeting of Republican national committee officers. Others expressed the belief that the President and the party chairman had reached an agreement that assured him of his continuation in office.

Senator Fess, of Ohio, is believed by many to be slated to succeed Chairman Huston.

Resignation Is Expected.

While it is known that some of the committeemen are intending to inform Mr. Huston of their dissatisfaction with his leadership tomor-

SOUTH ATLANTIC HOP IS BEGUN BY AIRMAN

BRAZIL START OF FLIGHT

Paris (Wednesday), July 9 (A.P.).—A wireless message from Jean Mermoz, French air-mail pilot, attempting the first eastward flight across the South Atlantic, today reported all was well on board and that he would head for Porto Pria, Cape Verde Islands, or direct for Dakar, French West Africa, according to the weather conditions near Africa.

The message was timed 12:45 a. m. French officials thought this probably was Greenwich meridian time (7:45 p. m. Tuesday, Eastern standard time).

Natal, Brazil, July 8 (A.P.).—Roaring down the length of Lake Bomfim in the seaplane with which he made the first westward South Atlantic mail flight, Jean Mermoz, crack French airmail pilot, took off this afternoon for a nonstop flight back to Africa.

Five hours after taking off he reported he was flying close to the island of Fernando Noronha. He said everything was going well and that he was flying at an altitude of 200 feet through a fine rain.

Eighteen hundred miles of ocean separated him from his objective, Dakar, in French Equatorial Africa. The South Atlantic never has been successfully crossed from west to east, and Mermoz, if successful, will win the laurels of a pioneer pilot on this flight.

The honors, however, are only incidental to the attempt, primarily intended to show the feasibility of regular airmail service across the South Atlantic between the old World and the new.

Mermoz, who got away at 4:32 p. m. (2:32 p. m., Eastern standard time), hoped to better the time of his first flight. On May 12-13 he crossed from St. Louis, Senegal, in 20 hours and 16 minutes, making the first airmail trip under bad weather conditions.

For two days the pilot and his radio operator, Leopold Gimme, and his navigator, Jean Abry, had been waiting on Lake Bomfin, 20 miles from Natal, for favorable wind and favorable weather.

Conditions for the take-off were excellent on Sunday, but delay in bringing the airmail up from the south held him motionless, and yesterday rain and fog did the same.

For hours he and his comrades today sat in their seaplane on Lake

President's Wife to Return To Camp After Short Visit

First Lady Having Flower Boxes Installed at Rapidan Retreat.

Mrs. Herbert Hoover, home again in the White House after a month's rest in the mountains, will make her sojourn here only temporary. Already, after three days in the city, she is planning to return to the restful seclusion of the President's camp on the Rapidan.

She probably will spend the greater part of her time there until she goes West with the President. The bracing, pine-scented air and the complete relaxation have proven an ideal antidote for months of strenuous activity as first lady of the land.

Like any good home-maker, the President's wife felt she should get row, the officers who will gather for the conference have no power to remove him.

Consequently, a session of the executive committee of the national group may be called should a majority of its members so desire. This committee has power to remove and elect officers.

There was still a strong belief last night that Mr. Huston himself would announce his resignation at or shortly after the gathering tomorrow. But those who have talked with him since his conference with President Hoover Sunday night are extremely skeptical over such a prospect.

Complaints From Congress.

Disgruntled party leaders have been recalling during the last several days what they term "promises" of the committee chairman to resign as soon as Congress adjourned. The fight against Mr. Huston's leadership has been particularly strong among the representatives who are facing reelection this year.

These candidates are finding it embarrassing to explain testimony given the Senate lobby committee that the Republican chieftain had solicited funds for the Muscle Shoals lobby of the Tennessee River Improvement Association and that he had used this money for personal investment before turning it over to the association.

Complaints have also come from senators and representatives that Chairman Huston has not been active enough recently. The fact that he was sued for a debt just about the time he took office is also recalled with some discomfiture.

Additional Cases Confront Capone

Two New Perjury Charges Substitute for Those Quashed in Court.

Miami, Fla., July 8 (A.P.).—Two new charges of perjury were filed today against Scarface Al Capone as the Chicago racketeer's attorneys completed their defense for a trial of two other charges scheduled to open in criminal court here tomorrow.

The new charges were based on information filed by County Solicitor George McCaskill to substitute for two perjury counts against Capone, quashed yesterday by Criminal Court Judge E. C. Collins.

Capone was arrested and held under $14,000 surety bond on the per ury charges as a result of his testimony in a false arrest case brought by him against S. D. McCreary, director of public safety of Miami. The case, later dismissed, alleged that Capone had been arested May 8 during the city's official campaign to drive him from the community.

VETERANS' AGENCIES UNDER UNIT CONTROL

Consolidation Goes Into Effect, With Gen. Hines as Administrator.

IS $800,000,000 PROJECT

(Associated Press.)

All veterans' agencies of the Government yesterday were brought under single control by President Hoover with Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, for several years head of the Veterans' Bureau, as administrator.

Mr. Hoover, in announcing he had prepared the executive order to carry into effect provisions of the bill passed by Congress at his request, said the new establishment "becomes one of the most important functions in the Government" and represents the most significant reorganization of the governmental machinery during the present administration.

The act, which became effective with the issuance of the President's order, brings the Veterans' Bureau, an independent establishment, the Pensions Bureau, from the Department of the Interior, and the Soldiers Home, from the War Department, all under the Veterans' Administration.

The consolidated budgets of these three services for the present fiscal year amount to approximately $800,000,000. The President expects, however, important economies to be effected through the consolidation and coordination. These are to be brought about, he said, through administration of hospitalization and domiciliary activities and in the better handling of fiscal relations with veterans throughout the entire organization.

Certain functions are to be transferred from one division to the other, but the President said these changes would come gradual'' and without disturbance to their administration.

Gen. Hines, whom the President said was remaining with the new establishment to give the Chief Executive the advantage of his wide experience during the reorganization, has been offered an attractive commercial position and the President indicated his tenure would be temporary.

Gen. George H. Wood is to be continued as head of the Soldiers Home with the board of managers probably constituted into an advisory board.

The Pensions Bureau will be administered by an acting commissioner of pensions for the present and the Veterans' Bureau by an acting director.

MAN IS ACQUITTED ON 'CRACKER' COUNT

Altizer, Acused of Hurling Explosive Into Car, Will Testify in Jewett Case.

SAYS POLICEMAN DID IT

Elmer Altizer, accused of injuring two children by throwing firecrackers into the car in which they were riding on July 4, and with possessing eighteen pints of liquor, was acquitted on he first charge and given six months or $500 on the second in Police Court yesterday.

He was released on bond to appear as a witness in the jury trial of Frank Jewett, a former policeman, who faces similar charges. Altizer admitted driving the car from which the firecrackers were thrown, but charged Jewett with throwing them. He denied possession of the eighteen pints found in his car.

Charges were brought against Altizer by Joseph I. Wilson, of 1312 Florida avenue northeast, who was driving the machine in which the firecrackers exploded, injuring Joseph I. Wilson, jr., seven months old, and John Wilson, eight years old.

Altizer, testifying in his own defense, said that he had thrown a few firecrakers in Maryland on the Fourth, but had fired none in the District. He admitted speeding up his machine after he found that the Wilson car contained children.

Jewett, who is the father of four children, was held under bond of $1,100. Assistant District Attorney John R. Fitzpatrick represented the Government in the trial before Judge Isaac R. Hitt.

Judge's Wave of Hand Spells Mute's Disaster

Judge Ralph Given waved his hand gayly at a defendant in Police Court yesterday, but the wave cost Fred Houchins $10, for it was the judge's method of telling the deaf-mute that he had been found guilty of drunkenness and must either "put" or take ten days in the hoosegow.

Adept at finger language, Judge Given argued at length with Houchins before giving him the final thumbs down that represented the sentence. Houchins had the last "word" however, but no one but the judge could tell what his farewell flourishes spelled.

EQUAL LABOR ISSUE HALTS COAL PARLEY

Miners and Operators Unable to Agree on Equalization of Employment.

NO COMPROMISE IS NEAR

New York, July 8 (A.P.).—Anthracite miners and operators disagreed today concerning equalization of employment and finally turned to other matters without any announcement of any compromise.

The morning session was devoted to discussion of the question of employment duirng slack periods, and when adjournment came at noon it still was before the conference, which is meeting in an attempt to formulate a new agreement to replace the one now in effect.

The statement issued after the second session of the day made no mention of this question, however, and it was taken for granted that a deadlock had occurred and the whole matter had been held over for consideration later.

The morning statement from the conference rooms read:

"The joint meeting of the representatives of the anthracite operators and the United Mine Workers was resumed today. Discussion of equalization demands of the mine workers was resumed where it left off yesterday.

"Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the mine workers, and other members of the mine workers' committee urged the representatives of the operators to grant this demand. The operators urged that under present conditions in the anthracite market the demand for the special product is such that it is impractical for them to do so. The economic situation as affecting the first demand of the mine workers was also discussed again.

Man Seized at Raskob Home Taken to Hospital

Wilmington, Del., July 8 (A.P.).—Arrested while loitering about the Claymont estate of John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, a man said by the police to be L. Clifford Alden, 27 years old, of 2035 Roosevelt Boulevard, Hibbing, Minn., was taken today to the State Hospital for the Insane at Farnsurst and held for observation.

The prisoner made two attempts to escape before he was locked in a cell at the police station here. In his possession, police said, they found several hundred cards bearing the names of wealthy men, including Rasko, Pierre S. duPont and Alfred P. Sloan. Detailed information concerning the men, their affiliations, their addresses and their families was noted on the cards.

NEW YORK CENSUS TOTALS 6,958,792

Gain of 1,338,744 Scored by Metropolis, or Average of 24 Per Cent.

MANHATTAN ALONE LAGS

New York, July 8 (A.P.).—The children of almost every civilized region of Mother Earth added 1,338,744 souls to New York City's brimming pot of humanily during the last decade, and the metropolis maintained its supremacy as America's first city with a total population of 6,958,792.

Final census figures completed today disclosed a gain of 24 per cent in the past ten years, with four of the five boroughs showing heavy increases. In 1920 the total population was 5,620,048, and in 1910 is was 4,766,883.

The Bronx—"handle" of the metropolitan melting pot and last to complete its census—announced a 1930 population of 1,266,734, gaining 534,718 over 1920 when it contained 732,016, and topping Cleveland, Baltimore and Pittsburgh.

How Population Stands.

	1930	1920	Change
Brooklyn..	2,596,154	2,018,356	28.6% gain
Manhattan	1,856,439	2,284,103	18% loss
Bronx	1,266,734	732,016	73% gain
Queens..	1,082,212	469,042	130% gain
Richmond (Staten Island)	157,253	116,531	35% gain

Those figures reveal the intracity population trends leaning heavily to the eastward, Manhattan spilling almost one-fifth of its 1920 inhabitants in the Brooklyn, Queens and the Bronx.

Thousands have spread out into the roomier and airier boroughs from the thickly populated sections of old Manhattan. The teeming tenements o fthe foreign settlements on the lower East Side experienced the most drastic reductions, with hundreds of empty apartments reported throughout the districts.

The completed census announcement does not disclose the percentage of the various racial strains in the city, but estimates place the number of Jews at 1,835,000, Italians at 800,000 and Germans at 280,000.

Queens Gets Bulk.

The Jews no longer are concentrated on the lower East Side, but have moved in large numbers into the Brownsville and Williamsburg sections of Brooklyn and the Bronx. The Italians have settlements in Harlem, the Bronx and Brooklyn in addition to the original "Little Italy" on the lower East Side.

Yorkville, once a noted German section, has been heavily depopulated by residents of that nationality, who have scattered to the four corners of the city.

Queens Borough caught the bulk of the overflow from Manhatta nand more than doubled its population in ten years, showing a gain of 130 pe cent. Brooklyn, already with two million, had the smallest increase.

Ginger Paralysis Cause Discovered by Chemists

Oklahoma City, July 8 (A.P.).—Oklahoma City chemists today said they had identified tentatively as treocysyl phosphate compound, a slow acting poison contained in Jamaica ginger which caused a strange paralysis malady crippling approximately 600 persons here.

Several chickens died after injections of the phosphate. All but one of six living have paralysis of the legs, a characteristic of the malady in human beings. The paralysis appeared in dogs from 30 to 40 days after the phosphate was administered. The blood pressure dropped noticeably with the injection of the compound.

14 Now Held in Alleged New York Arson Ring

Buffalo, July 8 (A.P.).—Harry Bennett, alleged "touch off" man for western New York's $1,000,000 a year arson racket, was, to quote the police, "still talking tonight."

Two more arrests today brought the total to fourteen persons arrested since Saturday night in connection with the racket which has been under police investigation for several months. The latest arrests were those of Adolf Kelemen, head of the Liberty Holding Co., a Buffalo real estate company, and his brother, Benjamin, owner of the Lakelands Hotel, on Point Breeze near Albion. No charges have been placed against them, but they were detained for further questioning.

BINGHAM HAS FISCAL PLAN FOR DISTRICT

House-Senate-Commissioner Body Proposed to Fix Sum Each Year.

CLASHES WITH SIMMONS

Another plan for ending the perennial battle over how much the Federal Government should contribute toward the support of the District Government was put forward yesterday.

Senator Hiram Bingham (Republican), of Connecticut, chairman of the Senate appropriations committee that handles the District appropriation bill, suggested that the problem be managed by a permanent commission which would decide annually what the contribution should be.

The commission would be composed of two senators, two members of the House, a member of the Cabinet, a District Commissioner, and an outstanding local citizen.

Unless he has changed his mind, Representative Robert G. Simmons (Republican), of Nebraska, who handles the appropriation bill in the House, would almost certainly fight the Bingham proposal. The Nebraskan put through a resolution in the closing hours of the last session which calls for the appointment of an all-House committee to study the fiscal relations problem and to go into the tax situation here generally.

So far the committee has not been created, and it would not be surprising if Speaker Longworth postponed creating it for several months.

REPORT ON TRAFFIC IS FAVORED IN PART

Parking Committee of Park and Planning Group Will Make Changes.

FURTHER STUDY WANTED

Tentative approval was given yesterday by the automobile parking committee of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to the preliminary traffic improvement report made by Dr. Miller McClintock, of Harvard University, provided certain changes are made.

Capt. E. N. Chisholm, acting director of the commission in the absence of Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, was directed to make the changes, after which the committee will reconvene for a further study of the report. About two weeks probably will be required for these revisions, Capt. Chisholm said last night.

What sections of the report are held unsatisfactory was not revealed yesterday, as Capt. Chisholm explained that the document still is held confidential and will not be made public until after its final approval by the committee.

The report, which covers every phase of the traffic situation in Washington, was made by Dr. McClintock after an exhaustive study of traffic conditions here during the past two months. The parking committee is headed by Col. Grant and includes Capt. Chisholm, William H. Harland, director of traffic for the District; Inspector E. W. Brown, chief of the Traffic Bureau, and representatives of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, Washington Automotive Trade Association, Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, Board of Trade, and other civic and business organizations in the District.

The couple married on May 30, 1918. Five children are now in the husband's custody and the present address of the wife is unknown, according to the petition. Mrs. Rebekah Greathouse is counsel for the plaintiff.

GOVERNOR REFUSES PARDON TO MOONEY

PRISONER'S REPLY CURT

Los Angeles, July 8 (A.P.).—Thomas J. Mooney, militant labor leader, serving a life sentence with Warren K. Billings for the 1916 Preparedness Day bombing in San Francisco, today was denied a pardon by Gov. C. C. Young.

The governor's action ended another chapter in Mooney's thirteen-year battle for freedom. Similar defeats were suffered before when two of Gov. Young's predecessors refused to pardon Mooney.

Gov. Young followed recommendations of the State Supreme Court which last week refused to recommend a pardon for Billings and of the advisory pardon board which last night took similar action on Mooney's plea.

Both Cases Parallel.

The governor said he considered the cases parallel and both men either were innocent or guilty of the outrage that caused 10 deaths and injured 40 persons and offered some hope for Mooney in the suggestion the Supreme Court grant a hearing if proof were offered that perjured testimony was responsible for the convictions.

The governor referred to an affidavit of John McDonald, made in 1921, which asserted his identification of Mooney and Billings at their trials was spurious. The governor said he believed Mooney and Billings would have called attention to "such spurious identification" during the trials.

If Mooney is innocent it would be a "blot upon the good name of the State" to keep him in prison, the governor said.

Mooney in Tirade.

"On the other hand," he added, "if he was not innocent, he was guilty of one of the most uncalled-for and atrocious crimes ever committed—the wanton murder of unsuspecting men, women and children gathered upon a public street to witness a patriotic demonstration of San Francisco citizens."

Mooney, when informed at San Quentin Prison of the governor's action, launched into an attack against Gov. Young which ended only when Warden James D. Holohan stopped him with the statement he would not have prisoners issuing "political proclamations."

"If we do not get justice in this administration, we will get it in the next," Mooney said.

Dead Banker Played Ponies, Inquiry Finds

Omaha, Nebr., July 8 (A.P.).—Federal authorities and bank officials investigating the death of E. L. Droste, Omaha banker, whose body was found yesterday in the Missouri River near Sioux City, Iowa, said today they had uncovered evidence that Droste had lost heavily on horse races. Assistant United States Attorney Epperson said Federal examiners had found indications that he had paid $100 daily to a Cincinnati gambler for one race tip daily.

Apparently Droste had jumped from a bridge into the river. Before he disappeared last Wednesday he admitted defalcations of $30,000.

Boston, Mass., July 8 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Boston saw a sight worthy of her years today when three 100-foot pine masts were stepped into the black hull of an old frigate. When the job was done the ancient U. S. S. Constitution took on again the shape of the fighting ship built in Boston 133 years ago.

The fore and the main and the mizzen were trussed, hooked, slung, hoisted, poised and lowered to their mast partners, weighing an aggregate of 40 tons. Tonight a gold piece rests under one, a silver dollar under another, and a copper penny, minted in 1814, under the heel of the mizzen mast, represents the pennies that American children gave to restore Old Ironsides as a living page of American history. Sailoring tradition got a bit of a jolt when Gov. Allen dropped a silver half dollar in behalf of his wife in the mizzen mast socket with the penny.

With the huge masts stepped, tugs carefully nudged the reconditioned frigate into the harbor and for the first time in 33 years the Constitution moved again in open water.

Tonight she was back again at her old berth in the navy yard. The rigging of her is a short job. When she is done she will stand a monument to the antiquarian research of a Maine man, John A. Lord, and is the shipwright's skill of a score of Maine shipbuilders.

Youths Held in Death Of Alabama Girl-Wife

Jasper, Ala., July 8 (A.P.).—Charges of murder were filed today against H. B. Riggers, 23, and Vinyard Williams, 19, held in jail here in connection with the death of the former's young wife.

Riggers told officers he and his wife were en route from Cape Girardeau, Mo., to California and that she was killed as she lay asleep on the railroad tracks near Dora, Ala., early yesterday. He said the train that killed her brushed him aside.

U. S. Steel Official Pays $1,937 Extra Duty

New York, July 8 (A.P.).—Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the finance committee of the United States Steel Corporation, today was required to pay $1,937 additional duties on wearing apparel which he and his wife brought from Europe on the liner Olympic last night.

No fines or penalties were assessed. Philip Elting, collector of the port, decided that the failure to declare the goods was purely accidental.

"Check Girl" Held In Stamford, Conn.

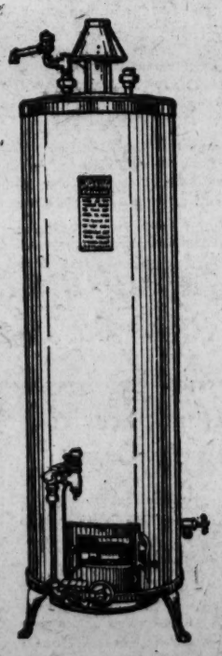
Alleged Operator Here, Who "Trimmed" Two Stores, Arrested.

District police will send to Stamford, Conn., to bring back Miss Catherine Rickaby, 24 year old, of Coldwell, N. Y., who was arrested in that city and is wanted here for issuing worthless checks.

On October 30, 1929, Miss Rickaby allegedly issued a worthless check to a downtown store drawn on a Stamford bank as payment for merchandise. Soon after this she is alleged to have purchased apparel at a store at 704 Eleventh street northwest and issued another bogus check also drawn on a Stamford bank.

Miss Rickaby is being held in Stamford under $1,500 bail. She was arested after police trailed an automobile driven by a man who represented himself as a lawyer and inquired at police headquarters there whether Miss Ricaby was wanted by police.

...Did you Turn Off the Water Heater?



HOW often is this question asked in your home? Morning, afternoon, evening—even at night—the constant demands of an old type water heater.

Have you ever watched yourself—is this the way you do it? First thing in the morning, down the basement to light the water heater—nine o'clock, after the breakfast dishes are washed, to turn it out—about half past eleven down again to have hot water for the kiddies to wash up when they come in from school—one o'clock once more to turn it out—four o'clock down again to light up for dinner—six o'clock to turn it out. About ten in the evening—oh well, I'll not take a bath tonight. Too tired.

More and more people recognize the convenience of a

REDS IN MIMIC WAR BLOCKADE DEFENSE

ATTACKERS ARE ACTOVE

The Red attacking forces have defeated the Blue defensive navy and blockaded it, in the mimic practice warfare now being waged along Chesapeake Bay, accordingto an official communique from the headquarters of the Third Corps Area at Fort George G. Meade, Md., last night, which said in part:

"Reds continue active in the war with the Blues, the Reds representing the forces of enemy nations, while the Blues are the forces of the United States of America.

"The Reds have defeated the Blue navy and blockaded it. Reds have air superiority." The Blues are represented by the staffs and commands and certain communication troops of the Twenty-eighth, Twenty-ninth, Seventy-ninth, Eightieth and Ninety-ninth Infantry divisions; the Sixty-second Cavalry division, and the Fifty-second Cavalry brigade, and Regular Army troops now present in the field.

There are 181 Regular Army officers, 212 National Guard officers, 273 Organized Reserve officers, 11 warrant officers, 929 Regular Army enlisted men, and 856 National Guard enlisted men "fighting" the Reds.

Visibility was poor yesterday morning due to haze over the lower bay, and smoke carried from fire in the Dismal Swamp.

The C. M. T. C. Cavalry is now full into its first full week in camp at Fort Myer, Va., under the watchful eyes of Regular Army instructors, and already the youthful "yellowlegs" are developing deep coats of tan under the blazing Virginia sun.

The youths were addressed yesterday by the Rev. R. Rush Rankin, dean of Georgetown University, who spoke on "The Social Aspects of Citizenship." Each day the trainees attend lectures given by educators, government officials and others in the citizenship course which is a part of the prescribed training at the camp.

MYSTERY WITNESS ENTERS LINGLE CASE

"Woman," Who May Have Been Man, Talks With Rathbun for Hour.

WANTED MAN GIVES UP

Chicago, July 8 (A.P.).—A mysterious witness, dressed as a woman, but with the physique of a man, today appeared before the investigating committee delving into the assassination of Alfred Lingle, Tribune crime reporter.

This strange person, heavily veiled and wearing goggles, lent drama to the inquiry, but provided no public information toward solution of the case that has brought many charges of alliance between organized crime and politics.

The new witness appeared unexpectedly carrying a suitcase as though she or he had arrived by train. The newcomer was taken into the offices of Charles F. Rathbun, Tribune attorney and special assistant State's attorney; after more than an hour of conference the veiled person was taken to the detective bureau.

Photographs Are Unusual.

The photograph revealed the person as of unusually large stature for a woman, with calloused hands, the photographer said.

A reporter for the Times who saw the witness transferred from the investigator's office to the detective bureau, said he found in the police car afterward a card engraved with the name "Irene Kelly," of Minneapolis.

In the meantime, Louis Clementi, reputed underworld character who police said was wanted for questioning about the Lingle case, walked into detective headquarters and gave himself up to Chief of Detectives John Norton. He was held for investigation.

The grand jury investigation of the Lingle slaying went forward today, along with the opening of an inquiry by the Chicago Church Federation, which launched a secret investigation of its own.

Brundige Willing to Appear.

A dispatch from St. Louis said Harry Brundige, reporter for a St. Louis newspaper, who wrote several articles charging unprofessional conduct of unnamed Chicago newspapermen, was willing to go before the grand jury, but saw no reason for a preliminary conference with the State's attorney. Brundige, basing his articles on the alleged alliance of Lingle with certain gangsters and officials, contended other Chicago newspapermen were "racketeers."

Los Angeles, July 8 (A.P.).—Warning detectives against removal of Frankie Foster, Chicago gangster, from jail here until a complete inquiry has been made into the contention Foster was not in Chicago when Alfred Lingle, reporter, was killed, Superior Judge Walton Wood today continued hearing a writ of habeas corpus until July 15.

The petition is based on an affidavit of Roy E. Stiles, a dry agent, who testified to buying twelve drinks of gin and four glasses of beer on the premises June 17 last.

Three Women Are Held In Theft of Hotel Linen

Theft of several hundred dollars worth of linens from the Hamilton Hotel has been traced to three colored women employes of the hotel who were arrested yesterday by police. Police say they recovered most of the property at a second-hand clothing store.

Those arrested are Getis ElizaBeth Fletcher, 24 years old, Newport place, near Twenty-first street northwest; Mabel Moore, 28 years old, New York avenue near Third street northwest, and Annie Fountainac, 21 years old, Lindin street near Twelfth street northeast. They are being held at the House of Detention.

PAY RAISE VICTORY HAILED AS LESSON

Commissioner Reichelderfer Says Public Support Won Increase.

SERVICE HEADS GUESTS

In obtaining salary increases for police and firemen, Washington has learned a valuable lesson in how to go about getting beneficial local legislation, Commissioner Reichelderfer declared at a luncheon given heads of the Police and Fire Departments at the Willard Hotel yesterday by trade and civic organizations.

"In putting through this measure, the people of Washington have set for themselves a formula that might wisely be followed in the future," Commissioner Reichelderfer said.

"It seems that we must start with an idea, and then show that the united indorsement of the people of Washington is behind it. That is how the pay increase bill for the policemen and firemen was put through, it seems to me. And I am told that it is a single instance in which the people of the National Capital have whole-heartedly backed local legislation.

"That formula is a valuable lesson to remember. I firmly believe that this occasion marks the beginning of a new era of contentment in the Police and Fire Departments," Commissioner Reichelderfer concluded.

Crosby Sees Benefits.

Commissioner Crosby voiced the opinion that nothing builds up morale more than good pay. He predicted that Washington will profit from the pay increase for police and firemen because the morale of the men will be strengthened and financial worries lessened.

Maj. Henry G. Pratt, chief of police, said that by giving Washington the same consideration in the future that the people of Washington gave the salary increase campaign the Police and Fire Departments can repay what has been done for them.

Charles W. Darr, president of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, who presided, declared that the passage of the pay increase measure is the beginning of bigger things for the two departments.

Chief George S. Watson, of the Fire Department, and retiring Engineer Commissioner Ladue spoke of the valuable aid given by trade bodies and citizens associations.

Congress Is Thanked.

The luncheon culminated in the adoption of resolutions thanking Congress for "this added evidence of their profound interest in the welfare of the public officials of the Nation's Capital."

The luncheon was given by the Chamber of Commerce, the Board of Trade, the Federation of Citizens Associations, the Merchants and Manufacturers Association and the Central Labor Union as a celebration of the passage of the pay increase bill. The heads of these organizations were present together with about 100 members of the Police and Fire Departments, including captains and lieutenants of the various fire companies and police precincts.

Letters, extending congratulations to the two departments, from Senator Bingham and Senator Capper and Representatives Zihlman, Simmons and Lampert were read. All these men were instrumental in obtaining passage of the pay increase measure through their membership on Senate and House appropriations committees.

Fiji Island Chieftains Will Visit in Capital

Two long-haired, barefoot Fiji Island chiefs, Jiali Tikowale and Setaraki Cevaca, who have been touring the United States in the interest of foreign missions, will arrive in Washington at 12:05 o'clock this afternoon. They will be dressed in native costume.

The men will be accompanied by the Rev. and Mrs. A. G. Stewart, who for the past 26 years have been missionaries on the Fiji Islands. At 8 o'clock tomorrow night they will speak at the Capitol Memorial Church, Fifth and F streets northwest.

YOUTHFUL LINDBERGH NAMED AFTER PARENT

Until tonight it was firmly believed that the "eaglet" had been named Charles Morrow Lindbergh. He has yet to be viewed by the public. It is unlikely, however, that his photograph will appear in the newspapers for some time, as photographers have dogged the grounds of the Morrow home for days, hoping for even a "long shot" picture of the baby.

Mrs. Lindbergh intends to go with Charles Augustus, jr., to the Morrow summer home in North Haven, Me., within a week or so and probably will remain there until September.

Boy Injured in Fall.

Falling from trapeze rings while exercising at Rosedale playground, Jimmy Rabbit, 9 years old, of 512 Seventh street southeast, suffered a fracture of the left forearm and a dislocation of the right arm early yesterday afternoon. He was treated at Casualty Hospital and dismissed.

Among the new attractions that will be offered this year are a horseshoe pitching contest, a popularity contest and new games of various kinds.

The department has selected R. E. Kendrick as general chairman of the carnival. Fire Chief E. N. Ward will have charge of lighting the grounds, and the electrical display will be arranged in a May pole design. Z. B. Groves and J. R. Royston are in charge of the erection of stands. The sale of cold drinks will be under the direction of R. L. Harmon and George Clarke and the ice cream under Vernon Whitner. Bernard Atwell will supervise the horseshoe pitching tournament. The committee in charge of the games and amusements include Z. B. Grove, Douglas Royston, Boyd Case, Wilber Fisher, R. C. L. Moncure, Joseph Birch, J. R. Royston, O. C. Pearson, A. Hoffman, E. E. Eldridge, Wilber Fisher, Earl Bruner, E. H. Schofield, W. Tasker, W. Weaver, and M. C. Grasty.

The Ladies Auxiliary of the department will serve barbecue and home-cooked foods at all hours.

At the meeting of the joint committee of the Fire Department and the School and Community League of McLean that will have charge of the McLean fireman's carnival to be held during the first week of August a tentative list of committee chairmen was drafted. The committees were divided into four divisions.

In division number one Earl Sanders will be in charge of athletic contests. Chief J. H. Beattie will take charge of the drill and hook-up contest between the various fire departments attending the carnival, a new feature in the local carnival program. Mrs. Bruno Whittig and Mrs. I. B. Fadley will be in charge of the baby show. Franklin Gicker, jr., will be chairman of the dancing committee; Albert Gorham, the tug of war; Mrs. Katherine Cunningham, the 4-H Club work exhibit; and the school exhibit is expected to be in charge of Mrs. Fadley, president of the Parent-Teacher Association.

J. W. Preston is chairman of division 2, which includes games and amusements. The subchairmen of this division include John Carper, Lemuel H. Crowder, J. Hunter Mack, Albert Gorham, I. B. Dailey, John Preston, Clinton W. Florence, Mrs. I. B. Fadley, and Catherine Kefauver.

Division three includes the grounds and parking, with I. B. Dailey general chairman. Lewis Magarity will have charge of the electric lighting, J. P. Frech decorations, Jesse Dailey the erection of stands; Otto Voight parking, and Carl R. McIntosh, law and order.

John Payne is the general chairman of division 4 which includes business administration and the purchasing of all supplies. Orlando Whitley will have charge of concession spaces, Harry Farver, finances and Milton Downes, advertising and publicity.

J. Clement Storm will have charge of the refreshments. The ice cream will be sold by the girls 4-H Club under the direction of Mrs. Katherine Cunningham. The Ladies Auxiliary of the Fire Department, with Miss Maud Rogers as chairman, will have charge of the lunch and dinner counter.

There will be a meeting of the Lincolnia Parent-Teacher Association tomorrow night in the auditorium of the Lincolnia School. At this time the members and patrons of the school will consider the advisability of changing from a Parent-Teacher Association to a community league, as it will be impracticable for the continuance of the present form of organization next year because of the consolidation of the Lincolnia School with the school at Annandale.

District Deputy Grand Master C. E. Butler, of Alexandria, will install the new officers of the Falls Church Lodge, No. 11, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, at Falls Church tomorrow night.

The Colvin Run School and Community League will hold its meeting tomorrow night in the auditorium of the Colvin Run School.

The members of the Mayflower Rebekah Lodge will meet tomorrow night in the Odd Fellows Hall at Accotink. From there they will visit the Virginia Dare Lodge at Dumfries for the installation of that lodge's new officers.

The executive committee of the Fairfax County Red Cross met yesterday afternoon in the health office at Fairfax. The various county branches made a report of the work they had accomplished during the past year. The treasurer reported that from November, 1929, to January 30, 1930, the receipts amounted to $1,816.74 and the expenditures $1,490.05. Of this amount $666.65 had been contributed to the support of the county health unit. The various chapters in the county had pledged $833 to the support of the county unit and of this amound $288.50 had been paid.

On the suggestion of Miss James, of the National Red Cross headquarters in Washington, the executive committee adopted the program for the coming year, which included the organization of Junior Red Cross chapters throughout Fairfax County and the preparation of Christmas boxes to be sent to the men in foreign service.

Mrs. U. S. Walters, of McLean, submitted her resignation as chairman of the county nursing committee, and Mrs. J. W. Cox, of Acotink, was appointed temporary chairman of this committee. Mrs. Herbert L. Seamons, Fairfax County Red Cross nurse, submitted her annual report to the committee. Miss Ruth Richards, of Clifton Station, Va., was elected to the executive committee to represent the Red Cross in that community.

The executive committee adjourned to meet again in September, at which time preparations for the annual Red Cross roll call will be made.

The Fairfax County 4-H Club council, which consists of the officers and leaders of all the 4-H Clubs in the county, will meet this afternoon in the auditorium of the Fairfax School. At this time plans will be made for the participation of the clubs in the Fairfax County fair in September. The council will also decide on what major project the clubs will center their activities during the coming year.

The Fairfax 4-H Club will meet this morning at the home of Mrs. James U. Kincheloe in Fairfax, where they will plan and prepare a dinner.

Centerville Grange will hold its regular meeting tonight in the auditorium of the Oakton School. At this time an election will be held for the successor of Miss Ludema Sayre, lecturer, who resigned because she was unable to serve as an officer during the balance of the year.

The quarterly business meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the Fairfax Volunteer Fire Department will be held this afternoon at 2:30 in the courthouse. The president, Mrs. James E. Nickell, asks that all members of the auxiliary attend, as at this time they will decide how much they will contribute toward assisting the firemen in meeting the note on the fire apparatus which is due next month.

RAY TO REPRESENT COUNTY AT SESSION

TOWN ELECTIONS HELD

J. Enos Ray, chairman of the Democratic State central committee of Maryland and prominent Democratic political leader of Prince Georges County, yesterday was named the Prince Georges County representative to the Washington regional highway committee which is to meet July 22 to discuss development of the areas contiguous to Washington. The Prince Georges County commissioners indorsed the plan of the committee in sending Mr. Ray.

The proposal to name a Prince Georges representative for the committee was received a week ago by the commissioners, but no action was taken at that time. The commissioners believe that the development of the National Capital area is a matter of great importance to the county and are anxious to do everything in their power to further an orderly development of the area close to Washington in order that the Nation's Capital may become one of the most beautiful shrines in the world. The development also will redound to the benefit of the county, the commissioners point out, and hence is of double benefit.

The committee was proposed by Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and will embrace representatives from all of the nearby counties of Maryland and Virginia as well as representatives of the District of Columbia Commissioners and the park and planning bodies of the three sections.

Town elections were held Monday at three Prince Georges County towns.

William W. Lewis, World War hero, was elected Mayor of Edmonston, Md., by a close majority, defeating the incumbent, A. E. Bost, by a margin of six votes. He was decorated for bravery while serving with Company K, Maryland National Guard, of Silver Spring, in the Argonne. He lived at Gaithersburg, Md., prior to the war, but has lived in Edmonston since that time. Councilman William T. Page was reelected in the First Ward, defeating former Councilman Milton M. Clarke by a six-vote majority. Eldridge Lusby was elected councilman from the Second Ward without contest. Henry A. Eberle was reelected treasurer.

Robert V. Yost was reelected as councilman from the Second Ward in Colmar Manor, defeating Paul P. di Marzo. This is the third time he has been elected and the first time that a councilman has been elected to third term in the town. Lewis Carter was elected councilman from the Fourth Ward, defeating E. Charvoz. Other members of the council do not come up for election until next year.

Horace W. Allen was elected Mayor of North Brentwood, defeating Julius A. Wheeler and the incumbent, John H. Gilmore.

Sandy P. Baker was elected councilman from the Third Ward, defeating the Rev. William H. Thomas and Robert A. Washington. Wallace Williams was reelected councilman from the Second Ward without opposition. Richard I. Quander was elected treasurer without opposition.

COURT GIVES DELAY IN HEDRICK CHARGES

New Accusations Against Arlington Supervisor Is Read at Hearing.

PERSONAL GAIN DENIED

ARLINGTON COUNTY.
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509 Clarendon, Va.

Arlington County Circuit Courtroom was filled yesterday morning when the case of Supervisor B. M. Hedrick, of Arlington district, accused of malfeasance in office opened with Circuit Judge Alexander T. Browning, of Orange, Va., the ninth circuit, on the bench.

In his answer to the petition filed in June by a committee of women from the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County calling upon Circuit Judge Walter T. McCarthy to cite Hedrick into court to show cause why he should not be removed from office for alleged malfeasance in connection with the installation of water and sewers in the Waycroft subdivision, owned and developed by the Arlington Investment Corporation, of which he is a director, Hedrick asserts the action against him is "solely" in the furtherance of a personal attack upon him.

Cites Lawful Contract.

In his fourteen-page answer, which was read by Attorney Crandal Mackey, Hedrick claims that the board of supervisors entered into a legal contract for the installation of sewers within the subdivision, as a result of which two warrants were issued in payment and that both warrants were legal in accordance with the general method of installation of a sewer system in the county, and that the entire cost has been duly repaid to the county by the Arlington Investment Corporation.

It is further asserted in the answer that the settlement was made April 17 of this year, and its legality passed upon by the Commonwealth's attorney.

After much discussion by counsel on both sides, the court granted a recess in order that counsel for the plaintiffs might draft an amendment to the original petition setting forth more clearly the specific charge.

It was revealed by the reading of the amendment to the original petition by Attorney Wilson Farr, chief of counsel for Hedrick, that there were new and specific charges brought out and that it would require time to prepare an answer.

Vital Change Made.

Citing one of the most vital changes, Farr read the following from the amendment:

"That Hedrick by acting as supervisor during 1929 derived benefit, advantages and profit from the money wrongfully expended for the use and benefit of the Arlington Investment Corporation, which belonged to the county, he being at the time of the expenditure a director of the corporation. The State law of Virginia provides that no member of the board of supervisors of a county can profit directly or indirectly by any contract made between the county for which he is acting where he himself is personally interested."

It is further brought out in the amendment that at no time were any notes given or executed nor any money paid as provided by law by the corporation for any water advantages received by the corporation until after the Commonwealth's attorney had called upon the board of supervisors and advised that notes be accepted in accordance with the provisions of the statute.

More Time Given.

It is further alleged that no attempt was made to pay for water which was installed in May, 1929, until December of the same year.

Despite the pleading of Attorney Farr that the county had been paid in full when it accepted the note for the total amount in April and that there was nothing before the court, the matter having been settled, Attorney Miller on the other side, declared the fact that a note has been given and not as yet paid does not excuse the defendant.

The court, considering the amendment and requests by counsel for the defendant that time be allowed to file an answer and the request by Attorney Miller that he be permitted to rearrange the original petition and amendment into one paper, granted each side five days and ruled that the case would again come up Tuesday, July 22.

MRS. HOOVER TO GO BACK TO CAMP SOON

back for a few days to see that everything was right at home. But even while she interviews housekeeper, maids and butlers, she is making a list of things to take back to camp.

There, away from crowds and receiving lines, Mrs. Hoover lives in simple summer frocks. She does not dress formally for dinner even when there are guests.

During the past month she has installed flower boxes in the windows of the President's cabin. She is having the banks of the stream nearby beautified with flowers and rustic steps. For long, luxurious days she has rested on the wide porch watching the clouds encircle the distant peaks or passing the time with knitting and reading. Most of her meals have been eaten on the porch and she virtually has slept under the stars, too. Her cabin largely is made of glass and screens to admit all the air and sunshine possible.

When Mrs. Hoover wants company she has Christine Vest, teacher of the President's school, a short distance from the camp. The President left the question of keeping school going through the summer to Miss Vest's judgment and it is still running.

Though Mrs. Hoover took along her wheel chair when she went to the mountains early in June following the advice of the White House physician, Capt. Joel T. Boone, she discarded it soon after reaching the cabin and now she is apparently restored to health. Though she may not be able to resume horseback riding for some time, she is once more driving her own car.

$690,000 IN JEWELS TAKEN FROM WOMAN

ROPE OF PEARLS GONE

Prague, Czechoslovakia, July 8 (A.P.).—Jewels worth $690,000, according to the police, were stolen in the night from the suite of Miss Clara Hyman, of Chicago, in the Imperial Hotel here. A $290,000 pearl necklace was among the articles taken.

The stolen articles, the police reported, aside from the rope of 190 large pearls, comprised platinum and gold rings with diamond settings.

The robbers escaped without leaving a clue, according to the police, and it was the theory of the officers that they probably had crossed the frontier. The foreign police have been notified.

Chicago, July 8 (A.P.).—Relatives of Miss Clara Hyman, 70, reported to have been robbed of $690,000 worth of jewelry in Prague, said they believed the victim was more likely Mrs. Cora Hyman, 179 Lake Shore drive, a sister-in-law of Miss Hyman. They said the amount reported was excessive and likely was less than $100,000.

Miss Hyman makes her home with her niece, Mrs. Melvil L. Straus, in Glencoe, a suburb. Mr. Straus is vice president of S. W. Straus and Co. She is a sister of B. E. Bensinger, president of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co.

Mrs. Hyman is a widow, socially prominent and wealthy.

Miss Clara Hyman sailed from New York on June 11. In Paris, she met her sister-in-law, Mrs. Cora Hyman, and a friend, Mrs. Charles A. Stonehill, of Glencoe. Together they went to Carlsbad.

Mr. Stonewall, who is president of the Chicago Mercantile Co., was reported by his office also to be in Europe.

GEN. NEVILLE DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

France with the Fifth Regiment of Marines, thus setting out upon the work for which he was best known.

He commanded the famous Fifth Regiment in the Verdun and Chateau Thierry sectors, and the equally well-known Fourth Brigade of Marines in ensuing operations near Soissons, St. Mihiel, the Champagne and the Meuse Argonne. His action during these campaigns won him the name of "Follow Me Neville," and the plaudits of his own country as well as decorations from other allies.

On March 5, 1929, he became commandant of the Marine Corps with the rank of major general.

Among the famed marine's decorations were distinguished service medals of his own country's Army and Navy, a Legion of Honor, six Croix de Guerre awards, the French fouragers, a brevet and a Victory Medal, the Marine Corps Expeditionary Ribbon and medals for the Spanish, West Indies, Chinese, Philippine and Mexican campaigns.

Mrs. Neville died several years ago. Mrs. Vest, the wife of a Navy lieutenant, was the only child.

Conspicuous in Courage.

An indomitable will, a sense of humor and conspicuous courage were joined with personal magnetism to make Maj. Gen. Wendell Cushing Neville a soldier of heroic mold.

Pride of the "Leathernecks," the former commandant of the United States Marine Corps followed the flag over six continents and many islands to win nearly twoscore valor decorations. "For distinguished conduct" at Vera Cruz in 1914 he was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, the first of a number of war medals to be won by him.

It was the World War, however, that brought him his greatest glory. As a colonel he led the Fifth Regiment of Marines through the fierce fighting in the Verdun sector and in the battle of Belleau Wood. Promoted to be a brigadier general, he next commanded the Fourth Brigade at Soissons, Marabache sector, St. Mihiel, Champagne, and the Meuse-Argonne. After the armistice, he marched the Fourth Brigade into Germany during the occupation. His outstanding bravery and gallantry in action brought decorations enough to cover even his ample chest as well as the new nickname of "Follow-Me-Neville."

Returning to the United States with his brigade, he led it in the big parades in New York City and Washington.

Born in Virginia.

Gen. Neville was born in Portsmouth, Va., May 12, 1870, the son of Willis H. and Mary Elizabeth Cushing Neville. After being graduated from Galt's Academy in Norfolk, he entered the U. S. Naval Academy, from which he was graduated in 1892, and joined the Marine Corps as second lieutenant. He soon became a first lieutenant and was breveted a captain August 10, 1898, for "conspicuous conduct" in the battle of Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

A veteran of the Chinese Boxer War in 1900 which carried him to Peiping, he later saw service in the Philippine campaign and commanded the Marines at the taking of Havana in 1906. At Vera Cruz in 1914, a year later, "Buck" Neville, as the then colonel was called, was in the thick of the Haitian campaign, which was followed by activity in the occupation of the Dominican Republic.

Prior to his appointment as commandant of the Marine Corps on February 7, 1929, he served several years as assistant to the commandant at Washingon. He was promoted to the grade of a major general in 1923, shortly after he had been detailed for duty as "commanding the department of the Pacific." Later he was assigned to duty as commanding general of the Marine barracks at Quantico, Va.

Gen. Neville married Frances Adelphia Howell, of Washington, in 1898. They had one daugher, Frances Howell, now Mrs. J. P. W. Vest.

MAGISTRATE GEORGE F. EWALD, of New York City, and five others have been indicted by a Federal grand jury on charges of mail fraud in promotion of stock of the Cotter Butte Mines, Inc., of Butte, Mont.

Indicted Jurist Faces Bar Action

Ewald Pleads Not Guilty to Mail Fraud in Sale of Copper Stock.

New York, July 8 (A.P.).—Under indictment with five others for mail fraud in the promotion of stock of the Cotter Butte Mine, of Montana, City Magistrate George F. Ewald today faced the possibility of an investigation by the Bar Association.

Federal Attorney Charles H. Tuttle said he had dispatched copies and records and letters concerning Ewald's alleged connection with the stock selling scheme to the grievance committee of the Bar Association and the district attorney's office.

Although he refused to reveal the contents of the records, he said Magistrate Ewald had received between $11,00 and $12,000 in commissions for sale promotion work. Chief Magistrate Corrigan announced that Ewald had stepped down from his bench "until the situation in the Federal courts is cleared up."

Ewald and his codefendants pleaded not guilty to their indictments today and were freed under bail.

CHINA ARMY REPELS REBELS FROM NORTH

SIX-MONTH WAR IS SEEN

Shanghai, July 8 (A.P.).—While increasing banditry ravaged its southern provinces, the Nationalist government battled today to turn back invading rebel armies from the north.

A new Nationalist offensive was reported in Shantung province to repel Northerners, who recently captured Tainan and swept southward and eastward in a great arc reaching from Yenchow to Weihsien. Hostilities began near Weihsien, government troops striving to recapture Tainan and drive rebels across the Yellow River.

Reinforced by troops from eastern Honan, Nationalists were reported endeavoring to turn the left wing of the huge northern battle line across Honan and Shantung provinces, after failing to dent rebel defenses in the center at Kaifeng, Honan.

Apparently despairing of carrying Kaifeng by assault as Nationalists expected him to do a few days ago, President Chiang Kai-Shek said he was planning to wear down the asserted poorly supplied rebel armies and defeat them in a month. His finance minister, T. V. Soong, however, thought six months would be required.

Although attacked fiercely by rebels in Honan and Shantung, the government was forced to give heed to increasing banditry ravaging its southern provinces.

Seven hundred brigands were killed in northwestern Kiangsi, but other hordes ravaged Hupeh, Hunan, Chekiang and Fukien provinces.

Fostered by famine, lawlessness has spread over Chekiang, accompanied by suffering and rice riots, while in adjacent Fukien bandits and rebels forced provincial authorities to appeal for aid to the imperiled central government.

RODERICK MEAKLE, son of a Paterson, N. J., banker, is near death with a bullet wound in his head, and Jennie Brauer, of Brooklyn, was found shot to death as a result, police believe, of a suicide pact.

New Jersey Man Bleeds to Death.

Mount Holly, N. J., July 8 (A.P.).—Believed to have opened an artery in scratching his leg, Walter J. Brown, 31, of Rancocas, near here, bled to death today before medical aid could be summoned. Physicians said he apparently had scratched too severely and opened the artery with his finger nail.

Insanity Plea Held Likely for Slayer

Banker Family Will Fight for Son if Suicide-Pact Wounds Are Survived.

Paterson, N. J., July 8 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Roderic Meakle, banker's son, accused of having killed his sweetheart, Jennie Brauer, in a suicide pact and then with having tried to take his own life, was still unconscious today in St. Joseph's Hospital here. Physicians said he has only one chance in a thousand to recover, but that he might live another week or ten days.

In the event of his recovery, it was indicated today, members of his family will seek to have him combat the charge of murder with an insanity plea. Prosecutor J. Vincent Bernitt, of Passaic County, said, however, that he has in his possession two love letters written to Miss Brauer by the young man in May, with which he hoped to be able to counter an insanity defense. Meakle is the son of William J. Meakle, Paterson banker.

Funeral services for Miss Brauer will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning in Riversale, and burial will be in Pompton Plains. Following the services the prosecutor will confer with the girl's mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Kern.

Bomfim and whistled for a wind, which they had to have to get the big seaplane and its 600 pounds of air mail off the water.

Late this afternoon it came and Mermoz rose from the water at 4:32 p. m. The plane and its load weighed nearly 4 tons.

A few minutes later he flew low over the Aeropostal Co.'s landing field near Natal, and waved to his fellow pilots of the company's coastal air line gathered below. Then he headed straight out for the island of Fernando Noronha, Brazilian penal colony, 150 miles from the coast.

Three dispatch boats of the Aeropostal Co., which in normal times speed across the south Atlantic in relays with the combination air and ocean mail, were stationed along his route from Natal to Dakar. They are standing by to assist the fliers if any trouble develops.

Mermoz will be able to communicate by wireless with at least one of them at all times.

Dakar was selected for the terminus of this flight instead of St. Louis because it offers better landing facilities in its sheltered harbor. The distance is slightly less, and this fact, together with following trade winds on the first part of the flight, persuaded Mermoz he could better his time across the ocean.

One of the chief points about his two airmail flights is that they are being made in a standard model seaplane, such as is used in the Aero-Postal Co.'s regular service. The object is the practical and scientific one, not of setting records but of testing out a new intercontinental communications system.

If conditions are favorable, he will not end his flight with the arrival at Dakar, but, changing to another plane, will ride the South American mail through to Toulouse or to Paris.

Mermoz is a regular air mail pilot of the Aero-Postal Co. He was accompanied on his flight from Africa to South America in May by Leopold Gimmie, radio operator, and Jean Aboy, navigator. Other airplanes are waiting at St. Louis and Dakar to rush the air mail along the African coast and across Spain to Paris.

The Aero-Postal Co., which runs the airmail service, has hitherto been using fast ships for the ocean lap of the air mail between Paris and South America, but has been seeking to establish an all-plane service, thus cutting down on the time between Paris and Buenos Aires.

The South Atlantic has been crossed from east and west many times, but there have been no flights from west to east.

Mermoz took off for St. Louis on June 8, but returned after 25 minutes because of bad weather. He was accompanied by the same crew that arrived with him in South America.

As on the previous flight, courier vessels of the Aero-Postal Co. are to be stationed at intervals along the sea route to aid in case his plane has difficulties.

Central Mission Picnic July 16.

Central Union Mission has set July 16 as the day for its annual outing for the 40 children of its Emergency Home and for approximately 700 mothers and children from Washington homes. The outing will be staged at Glen Echo Park.

Missouri Pacific May Acquire Lines

Qualified Permission Is Extended for Lease of Subsidiaries.

(Associated Press.)

A qualified permission was extended to the Missouri Pacific Railroad yesterday by the Interstate Commerce Commission to take over under lease and operate as part of its own structure the properties of some twenty subsidiary lines which it now controls, but which have a more or less separate organizations.

Before the central road can complete its plan for the extensive unification proposal, however, it must, by the terms of the decision, arrange to acquire ownership on a reasonable basis of a number of unnamed short lines, now independent, which connect with its system at various points in the Southwest.

Commissioner Eastman and Chairman McManamy dissented from the decision.

Investigations to Wait On Tariff Commission

(Associated Press.)

Pending appointment of the new Tariff Commission as called for under the tariff act of 1930, the sugar and other investigations ordered by the Senate will not be undertaken actively.

President Hoover has under consideration a list of names for the reorganized commission and is expected by Senate Republican leaders to submit some of them to the Senate this week, or at least before the special session ends.

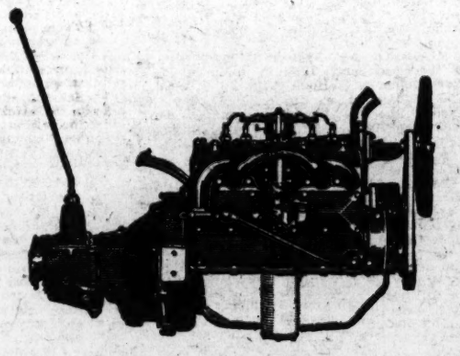
THE VALUE of SOUND DESIGN

New Ford engine gives outstanding acceleration, speed and power without sacrificing reliability or economy



THE GOOD PERFORMANCE of the Ford car, so apparent on every highway, is due largely to the sound mechanical design of the engine.

It has outstanding acceleration, speed and power, yet that is only part of its value to you. Greater still is the fact that it brings you all these features without sacrificing either reliability or economy.

That is the reason the Ford car has given such satisfactory service to millions of motorists all over the world and has been chosen by so many large companies that keep accurate cost figures. In every detail of construction it has been carefully planned and made for the work it has to do.

The design of the compression chamber is an important factor in the efficiency of the Ford engine. It is built to allow free passage of gases through the valves and to thoroughly mix the fuel by producing turbulence within the cylinders during compression. The spark thus flashes quickly through the whole fuel charge, resulting in quieter and more effective engine performance.

Other factors are the direct gravity gasoline feed, the specially designed carburetor, the new hot spot manifold, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves of larger diameter, statically and dynamically balanced crankshaft and flywheel, simplicity of the electrical, cooling, lubrication, and fuel systems and accuracy in manufacturing.

LINDBERGH ADVISES LEAGUE ON AIR CODE

Colonel Tells Geneva Group Uniform Marks, Signals and Reports Needed.

ONE OF THREE REPLYING

Geneva, July 8 (A.P.).—Three famous international airmen have joined in urging upon the League of Nations transit organization that the nations of the world should cooperate in establishing something like an international code for air navigation.

Communication to this end from Col. Charles A. Lindbergh Dr. Hugo Eckener and Gen. Italo Balbo, Italian air minister, today were published by the transit section. All indorsed the move to adopt international rules for the regulation of commercial aircraft.

The three airmen were replying to the section's request for statments from flyers who have become eminent in science of aviation and contributed to it by research and practical achievements.

Col. Lindbergh's View.

"Aviation must be considered from the international angle," said Col. Lindbergh.

"An ability to cover great distances in relatively short time makes it a leading factor in world intercourse. There is a great need for international cooperation in standardization of airways."

The flying colonel suggested that "a uniform system of markings and signals should be decided upon, and a comprehensive meteorological and radio reporting system established.

"The adoption of uniform regulations is of the utmost importance."

Dr. Eckener was of the opinion that if world-wide air traffic is to be organized, suitable agreements must be concluded between individual states.

Emphasizing the necessity of an atmosphere of good-will, he welcomed the league's efforts to insure the closest possible cooperation among the different nations in the sphere of civil aviation.

Must Work Together.

"Such efforts will powerfully assist the development of international air navigation. Only when the nations work together in trustful cooperation will humanity be able to share in the benefits that may be anticipated from the new improvements continually being achieved in the technical field."

Gen. Baldo, similarly approving the principle of international cooperation in air navigation, added, "In my opinion the secret of development and of consolidation of civil aviation lies above all in increasing safety."

Sir A. Conan Doyle Funeral on Friday

Spiritual Societies Hope to Talk to Author at Memorial Rites.

London, July 8 (A.P.).—Sir Arthur Conan Doyle will be buried on Friday in the garden of his home at Crowborough, Sussex, a few yards from the outdoor study where the creator of Sherlock Holmes spent many days devising the plots of his stories.

Lady Conan Doyle and the family, in choosing the site of the tomb, made plain that they wished the funeral to take place within the grounds of the estate. There will be no church ritual, and the burial ceremony will be entirely at the side of the grave.

A memorial service will be held in Albert Hall, London, on Sunday, by two London spiritual societies. Many believers hope that at this meeting the spirit of Sir Arthur will communicate with them. Some of the rumors about plans made by Sir Arthur to communicate with the family or friends received a dash of cold water today from the family itself. The report that he had left his fingerprints for use in checking his identity if he attempted to get in touch with them from beyond the grave was denied.

National Officers Euected by Elks

Allentown Man uSceeds Walter Andrews as Exalted Ruler.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 8 (A.P.).—Lawrence H. Rupp, of Allentown, Pa., was elected grand exalted ruler of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks today to succeed Col. Walter Andrews.

"In our haste to pursue the material things of life," said Mr. Rupp in a speech, "we are neglecting the things that are more important. Anomalous as it may seem, in a democratic land, we are losing our liberties. We are hedged about with laws and limitations."

Ovation Given Blease; Claims 40,000 Majority

Newberry, S. C., July 8 (A.P.).—Senator Cole L. Blease, who yesterday at Union asserted he approved of lynching Negroes who attacked white women, came home today to receive an ovation from his former neighbors and friends.

Speaking here in his campaign for reelection, the junior senator predicted he would win the Democratic nomination by a majority of 40,000 votes. His speech was punctuated by applause, and at the conclusion two small girls marched to the rostrum to present him with flowers.

Girl Cut and Bruised When Hit by Street Car

Miss Ruth Raffell, 18 years old, of 1234 Sheppard road northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital last night for cuts, bruises and an injured leg sustained when she was struck by a street car while crossing Fourteenth street between O street and New York avenue northwest.

The street car was operated, police reported, by Motorman Thomas Rector and C. L. Hinson was the conductor in charge. Miss Raffell was taken to the hospital in a taxicab, and after receiving treatment left and went to her home.

Private John R. Leach, of the Sixth Precinct, was promoted to sergeant and will be assigned to the same precinct, but will be in command of the liquor squad formerly commanded by Letterman.

Another change in the liquor squad will result from the promotion of Private Richard J. Cox to detective sergeant. Cox has been one of the liquor squad for some time and has kept clear of criticism of improper raids and rough tactics, although active in enforcement of the laws against organized vice and gambling.

The promotions were recommended by Maj. Pratt, and approved by the District Commissioners in the course of a lengthy board session.

The new lieutenants and their prospective assignments to new duties at their higher rank follows:

Sergt. Allan W. Guyer, Fifth Precinct, will remain there.

Sergt. Walter C. Balderson, Eighth Precinct, will remain there.

Varney Sent to Bureau.

Detective Sergt. Frank A. Varney, officially assigned to the Detective Bureau, but who has been acting as aid to Commissioner Herbert B. Crosby, is to be assigned to duty in the Tenth Precinct. Gen. Crosby is desirous of retaining him as his aid, and there will be no objection from police officials, but it will necessitate naming an acting sergeant in the Tenth Precinct to do the work which would be done ordinarily by Lieut. Varney.

Detective Sergt. Dennis J. Cullinane, Detective Bureau, will be assigned to the Eleventh Precinct.

Sergt. John J. Burke, Seventh Precinct, will remain there.

Sergt. John M. Roper, Twelfth Precinct, will remain there.

Detective Sergt. Warren O. Embrey, who has been acting lieutenant in charge of the Detective Bureau at night, will remain there as full lieutenant. Lieut. Charles P. J. Weber, recently promoted and sent to the Tenth Precinct, will be brought back to the Detective Bureau, the active command of which will be divided between the two lieutenants and Capt. Walter Emerson, under the supervision of Inspector William S. Shelby, chief of the bureau. This will give a commissioned officer in charge of the bureau on an eight-hour shift throughout the 24 hours of the day.

Detective Sergt. Bagby R. King, Detective Bureau, will be assigned to the Fourth Precinct.

Sergt. Arthur C. Belt, Third Precinct, will remain there.

The promotions Maj. Pratt recommended become effective today. The promotions as precinct detectives and plain clothesmen and other special duties he recommended will be made probationary for a six months' period.

Trio Feared Dead In Airplane Fall

Two Americans Thought to Be in German Ship; Five Saved From Sea.

Copenhagen, Denmark, July 8 (A.P.).—Five persons were rescued and three passengers were believed drowned when the German flying boat D-864, flying in the Stettin-Kalmar-Stockholm service, was forced down in the sea near Bornholm yesterday and later overturned.

The pilot, mechanic and a Swedish passenger were picked up by the Danish schooner Maja, while the Dutch vessel Spitz saved two more passengers whose names have not yet been reported. Three of the passengers were reported missing and it was feared they perished. It was believed that two of the passengers on the plane, named Burgkolter and a Miss Notrup, were Americans.

Pilot Kuring said the snapping of the crank shaft of the two hindmost motors, which were arranged in tandem on the upper deck, forced the flying boat down. Flying splinters of steel damaged its left wing and also the emergency radio.

DEMAND FOR FACTS ON TREATY PENDING

MOVE GAINS HEADWAY

tempt was made to probe deeper into the reasons for America's yielding to Japan in this matter.

But the trend of the discussion brought about a collapse of the plan to oppose the McKellar resolution. Even Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, announced that he would not oppose it irrespective of whether the softening amendment was adopted. Senator Johnson said he did not care what form the phraseology took and it is evident that the purpose of the resolution will be the same, with or without the Robinson amendment.

Presumably President Hoover will refuse to transmit the secret documents even if the resolution is adopted. This possibility was discussed yesterday, and Senator McKellar indicated that the Senate would not be powerless to deal with that situation when it arose.

Unless the pro-treaty forces can reorganize and consolidate their strength against the resolution today, the prospect of a sharp clash between Secretary Stimson, backed by President Hoover on the one hand, and the Senate on the other, appears inevitable. The real fight over the secret documents will then begin after the President or Secretary Stimson notifies the Senate that the demand for the secret documents will not be complied with.

Senator Moses stated just before adjournment that position taken by Secretary Stimson was, under the circumstances, untenable.

"He sent us certain papers under the seal of confidence," said Senator Moses. "Why didn't he send them all? Was there something he wanted to conceal?"

The treaty battle began with an exhaustive analysis of the pact by Senator Swanson (Democrat), Virginia, who asked that he be allowed to conclude his speech without interruption. A quorum was obtained when 50 answered to their names. Later, however, there was delay before a quorum of 50 could be obtained.

Swanson Is Congratulated.

Senator Swanson spoke for two hours, after which he was congratulated by Secretary Stimson and Senator Allen, who clasped his hand almost at the same moment. Mr. Stimson had slipped quietly into the chamber on the Republican side and held conferences at intervals with Senators Watson, Wolcott and others. He continued his conferences in the Senate cloakroom while Senator Johnson spoke.

After a very thorough review of the naval armament situation, Senator Swanson concluded as follows:

"Mr. President, from a military and selfish standpoint, the United States can not afford to reject this treaty. From a higher and nobler purpose the treaty should have our approval. It is promotive of peace, conducive of good will among the nations involved and I hope marks the beginning of a more complete treaty for the limitation of naval armaments."

Senator Glenn was the only senator to attempt to defend Secretary Stimson's withholding the secret documents after Senator Johnson had begun his speech in support of the McKellar resolution.

Sharp Words Exchanged.

Mr. Glenn appealed to senators to have confidence in the President.

"It's not a question of confidence in the President of the United States," snapped Johnson. "It's a question of whether you have any confidence in your own manhood."

Senator Johnson insisted, in further reply to Mr. Glenn, that the duty of a senator was to think for himself and not find out what he was told to do and then do it. There were some sharp clashes between Senators Johnson and Glenn, especially when the former said he doubted whether facts he cited could "penetrate the cranium" of the senator from Illinois.

Senator Barkley announced that he was leaving for Europe today and will not be here when the treaty is voted upon. He favors ratification. The Senate meets at noon today, but tomorrow the daily sessions will begin at 11 o'clock.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader, who is under fire in his own State because of his London trip on behalf of the Republican administration, returned to the Senate yesterday and took an active part in the debate.

Walsh Sees "Politics."

Senator Walsh, of Montana, issued a statement last night through the Democratic national committee in part as follows:

"A statement issued a few days ago by the Republican national committee, sponsored by Representative Temple, did not receive the attention its importance deserves. It indicated that the party, in whose success he evinces such deep interest, is to claim, in the fall campaign, the negotiation and ratification of the naval treaty as the major achievement of the administration.

"Confronted with the dismal failure of all hopes for prosperous times, so freely predicted to induce the election of President Hoover, it is obvious from the statement referred to that the treaty is to be utilized to effect the election of Republican congressmen and to defeat their Democratic opponents.

"From this statement, it is reasonably to be inferred by the worldly minded that President Hoover's insistence upon keeping senators here to act on the treaty, notwithstanding the devastating heat of Washington in the dog days, is not so much concern for the peace of the world as it is to furnish campaign material for the congressional elections."

Fire Carnival Planned.

Leesburg, Va., July 8 (Special).—The annual carnival of the Leesburg Fire Company will be held this year August 1 to 9, inclusive. Many new attractions have been added this year, providing clean amusements for people of all ages.

Events of the War 13 Years Ago Today

JULY 9, 1917.

President Wilson declared an embargo on exports of all munitions, foods and fertilizers to prevent such shipments reaching Germany.

Heavily armed guards were stationed at Far Rockaway after it was discovered that seven transatlantic cables crossing there were being tapped.

The kaiser summoned Hindenberg and Ludendorf for a parley on major problems of internal reform to settle strife between the Reichstag and the government.

A German torpedoboat was destroyed when it struck a mine in the North Sea.

BIG PIER COLLAPSES AS CROWD LEAVES

Only Five Hurt as 350-Foot Wharf Crashes Into Delaware River.

DAMAGE PUT AT $50,000

Penns Grove, N. J., July 8 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Five persons were injured, two of them seriously, in the sudden collapse of the 350-foot pier of the Wilson Line on the Delaware River across from Wilmington, Del., early tonight.

Because the roof-covered pier fell in a single reverbrating crash into the high tide waters, police and firemen were unable, at first, to check the exact extent of the damage. First reports indicated that a dozen or more had been drowned, but late tonight police officially announced there had been no loss of life, although several crews would stand by at the wreckage during the night in case of emergency.

Two women and three men injured at the pier were given first aid treatment, and the two more seriously hurt were rushed to the Salem, N. J., Hopital. The estimated damage was placed at $50,000 by pier officials.

Five minutes before the long wooden pier, which contained two restaurants, two waiting rooms, an office, storage room and parking space for automobiles, had slipped into the water, a Wilson Line steamer had pulled out for Philadelphia, taking several hundred passengers aboard.

Fifteen minutes before the collapse the pier was a vertiable boardwalk of humanity. About 30 automobiles were parked on the span, awaiting the incoming passengers from Wilmington.

Within a few minutes of the crash, every available policeman and fireman in Penns Grove was rushed to the scene.

The exact cause of the pier collapse has not been fixed, police officials said, because most of their work has been directed at the rescue work and the checking up of the possible loss of life.

concerned, the only move that the Byllesby interests could make would be to try and persuade Congress to untie the hands of the commission. Unless there is a big shift in sentiment at the Capitol, however, that is going to be a prodigious task.

Mr. Hanson made a vigorous fight for the project when the Capper-Cramton bill was before the Senate District committee, and submitted an amendment that would have made the project possible. This, however, was ignored.

Mr. Hanson claimed that the power at Great Falls could be developed without injuring the scenic beauty there, and his claim was supported by Maj. Gen. Edgar L. Jadwin, then chief of Army engineers, and Maj. Brehon Somervell, then Army engineer in charge of this area.

Parkway $1,000,000 Voted.

Representative Louis C. Cramton, of Michigan, sponsor of the park bill, denied this claim, and he was supported by Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, the members of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and the representatives of scores of civic organizations throughout the country.

Meanwhile, Congress has authorized an appropriation of $1,000,000 to start work on the George Washington Memorial Parkway.

The District appropriation bill carried an item of $25,000 for a survey of the power situation in the National Capital, but so far this survey has not been started.

Found Door Open, Wilbur Hand Says

Man Who Escaped From Washington Jail Denies Bribery Was Used.

Wilbur William Hand, who mysteriously disappeared from the Fifth Precinct Station here in October, 1929, told questioners in Chicago, where he was captured last Sunday, that he "just walked" from the local police station.

Hand will be removed to the Ohio State Penitentiary to serve a sentence of 12 to 25 years for bank robbery, according to an Associated Press dispatch. A deputy sheriff from Bucyrus, Ohio, arrived in Chicago early yesterday to bring Hand to prison.

Hand has insisted that bribery played no part in his break for liberty from the Fifth Precinct. "I found the door open and I just walked out," he said.

BERLIN SETS PRICE ON EUROPEAN UNION

Briand Is Told in Note War Treaties Binding Reich Must Be Revised.

REICHSTAG LIKES PLAN

Berlin, July 8 (A.P.).—Revision of treaties by which Germany was bound after the war and a formula of equality for all nations were made known today as stipulations the German foreign office would make for consideration of France's proposal of a "United States of Europe."

The German reply to the memorandum of Foreign Minister Briand was the subject of a debate today in the foreign affairs committee of the Reichstag, at the close of which it was said in semiofficial circles that a majority favored an affirmative answer with reservations.

Whether stipulations other than those reported had been raised as Germany's cooperation proviso was not revealed.

The German reply was not made public. Its contents will be made known when it is handed to the French foreign office next week.

It was understood, however, in political circles that the note stresses the points of equal status of nations and equal security for all. It urges, furthermore, that the cooperation of all European and adjoining nations, not at present parties to the proposed Pan-European union, should be assured from the start.

This was said to refer to the United States, South American republics, Great Britain, Russia and Turkey.

Rome, July 8 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The Italian government's answer yesterday to the recent memorandum of Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, asking expressions of opinion on is proposed European federal union, is followed today by another exchange of asperities between the French and Italian press. The reaction of the French press to the Italian note is caustically commented upon by more responsible journals, such as the Tribuna and Giornale d'Italia, which declare that France is attempting "to bolster up old militaristic ideas."

Cashier Routs Robbers By Shot at Vault Door

Campton, Ky., July 8 (A.P.).—Rush Evans, assistant cashier of the Farmers and Traders Bank here, routed four robbers today by opening fire as they attempted to force him into the vault. The men fled carrying one wounded man with them and without having obtained any money.

The robbers fired one shot as they fled, but it went wild. Evans expressed the opinion that the man he hit was fatally wounded as a large pool of blood was left on the floor. The men fled in a small automobile. Sheriff Joe Ingram with a posse started in pursuit of them.

Mount Vesuvius Lava Flow Zone is Doubled

Naples, Italy, July 8 (A.P.).—Boiling lava tonight continued to flow in the crater of Mount Vesuvius, which yesterday broke into eruptive activity, but issued from a single mouth instead of, as yesterday, from three mouths.

In 24 hours the zone covered by the flow had doubled, but the explosive activity of the eruptive cone continues to be moderate, and Alessandro Malladra, director of the Vesuvian Observatory, still believes it eventually will die down without causing serious damage.

False Doctor Calls Cause Alarm.

Danville, Va., July 8 (Special).—Doctors who have been kept busy the past several days answering false telephone calls have appealed to the police to apprehend the culprit if possible. Numbers of physicians have complained of receiving anonymous calls to a fictitious address.

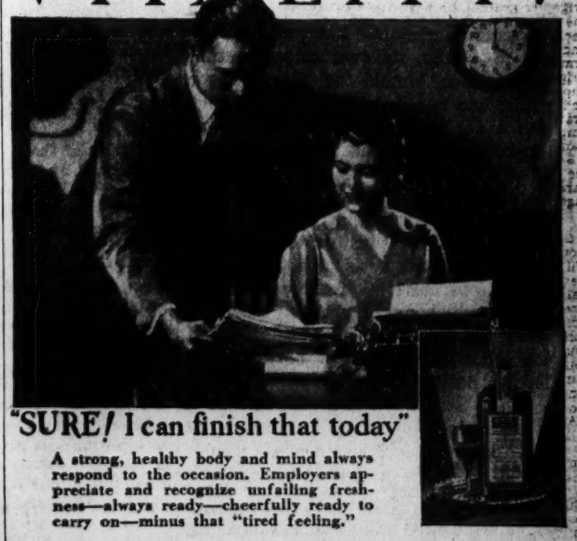
VITALITY!


"SURE! I can finish that today"
A strong, healthy body and mind always respond to the occasion. Employers appreciate and recognize unfailing freshness—always ready—cheerfully ready to carry on—minus that "tired feeling."
DON'T let a weakened body hold you back. Prolonged, it may result in so-called premature old age. Today's happiness and friends may be gone tomorrow. Has it ever been made clear to you that a strong, healthy body depends upon the right number of rich, red-blood-cells?
Thousands of people have a low blood count—to this may be attributed skin troubles, "run-down" systems and even more serious ailments.
Healthy blood should contain about 5,000,000 red corpuscles to every cubic millimeter—those tiny workers which give blood its color and are carriers of nourishment to every part of the body. Rich, red blood is the body's protector against infection and disease. It is dangerous to let the blood count remain below normal.
If you tire easily—lack pep—if your skin is not clear—if your appetite is "gone"—you owe it to yourself and friends to try S.S.S.
When you get your red-blood-cells back up to normal, that sluggish, let-down feeling, lack of appetite, skin troubles disappear. You should get hungry again and sleep soundly; firm flesh should take the place of that which was once flabby. You should feel strong. Your nerves become steady.
S.S.S. helps Nature build rich, red blood. It improves the processes by which the body is nourished.
For more than 100 years S.S.S. has been helping people regain and retain their strength and charm. Thousand of users have testified to its benefits in unsolicited letters of gratitude. Many have found it beneficial to take a few bottles at least once a year to keep their blood in good condition.
S.S.S. is made from strictly fresh vegetable drugs and is easily assimilated. All drug stores sell S.S.S. in two sizes. Ask for the larger size. It is more economical.

THE TREATY PAPERS.

Consideration of the London naval treaty has been suspended temporarily by the Senate while it fights out the question of obtaining the correspondence pertaining to the negotiation of the treaty. Secretary Stimson placed himself in an awkward position when he gave to the foreign relations committee certain highly confidential papers while refusing to transmit others. Senators who now demand all the papers point out that the preservation of secrecy can not be urged as the reason for withholding the papers from the Senate, inasmuch as Mr. Stimson has already exhibited documents which he warned the committee were to be kept inviolate. Why should he make some available, and hold others back? Can the Senate be held to secrecy in some cases and not in others?

There is danger in the controversy over the so-called "secret" papers, because a refusal on the part of President Hoover to transmit them might cause senators to oppose the treaty, while if he should transmit the documents, and they should become public, the revelations might give rise to a controversy between the United States and other countries and thus jeopardize the treaty. It is quite conceivable that if documents relating to the treaty should be withheld from the Senate a public outcry against ratification of the treaty would result.

President Hoover has repeated the assurance that the United States is under no obligation that is not expressed in the treaty itself. His conclusion that it would be incompatible with the public interest to transmit the papers to the Senate committee was doubtless based upon the fear that secrecy would not be preserved. The Senate has always followed the rule of holding such papers in confidence when they are transmitted in confidence, but innumerable instances can be cited in which individual senators have broken the rule. Indeed, the publicity resulting from "executive sessions" induced the Senate to change its own rules, so that nominations should be discussed in public and not in secret. This change was a decided step backward, as was shown in the disgraceful debates over Justice Hughes and Judge Parker. Possibly President Hoover and Secretary Stimson are fearful that individual senators, seeking reasons for defeating the treaty, could not resist the temptation to give out portions of the confidential papers, which might provoke a controversy between the United States and the other signatories, or between two foreign nations.

If the Senate should conclude that it is absolutely necessary to possess all the papers, correspondence, memoranda, and data relating to the negotiation of the treaty, it can either force the President's hand or refuse to consider the treaty. But matters have not reached that stage. The Senate has not yet demanded the papers, and the President has not refused to transmit them to the Senate.

VETERAN AGENCIES UNIFIED.

Consolidation of all war veterans' agencies under a single administration is a very important step. Three units formerly under different departments are brought together under one management. The Soldiers' Home and the Pension Bureau become virtually a part of the Veterans' Bureau, the largest of the three agencies.

In view of the fact that the new veterans administration will have a budget of approximately $800,000,000 many economies should be possible under unified management. President Hoover has done well to select Gen. Frank T. Hines, director of the Veterans' Bureau, as the new administrator of veterans' affairs. Gen. Hines is better acquainted with the problems of veterans' relief than any other individual, and is well equipped to direct the work of reorganization.

The transfer of activities will take place slowly, so as to work a hardship on no one. It is to be hoped, however, that the reorganization will be complete and that overhead expenses will be cut to a minimum. Care of war veterans is a tremendous expense to the taxpayers. Rigid economy should be practiced in the administration of relief so that disabled soldiers may receive the maximum benefit without extending the cost.

This reorganization prepares the way for adoption of a permanent policy with regard to war veterans. It is poor business to reward the veterans of one war more liberally than those of another. The Nation's defenders should be taken care of on a uniform basis. When a man is asked to risk his life and health for his country's sake he ought to know what to expect should he be disabled, or what his family might expect in event of his death. The time is ripe for Congress to outline a uniform policy of dealing with all veterans on an equitable basis. Such a policy can only be adequately worked out in time of peace.

COALITIONISTS REPUDIATED.

Senators Nye and Frazier, of North Dakota, were diehard coalitionists who never failed to advertise their opposition to the tariff bill and their love of the farmer. Two weeks before the primary last month they returned to their State and made a vigorous campaign against Representatives Burtness, Hall and Sinclair, who supported the tariff bill and stood by the Hoover administration on other matters. The two senators spoke at twenty farmers' picnics and elsewhere, attacking the tariff bill and condemning the North Dakota representatives for supporting it.

Burtness ran against T. J. Clifford, a young and able lawyer, and gathered in 70 per cent of the vote, in spite of, or perhaps because of, the opposition of the two renegade senators.

Hall ran against A. S. Marshall, State senator, Farmer-Labor, and a good campaigner, who joined Senators Nye and Frazier in attacking the tariff bill. Hall received 60 per cent of the total vote.

Sinclair ran against A. C. Townley, the famous Nonpartisan League organizer, who also attacked the tariff. Sinclair received 67 per cent of the total vote.

Gov. George F. Shafer ran for renomination, supporting the tariff bill and encountering the determined opposition of the two senators. Shafer received 35,000 majority, the largest ever received by a Republican candidate in North Dakota.

These figures measure the political strength of the two coalition senators of North Dakota. They have been repudiated by the Republicans of their State for their stand against a tariff protecting industry as well as agriculture.

Coming after the victory of Representative Dickinson in Iowa, in which Dickinson stoutly supported the Republican tariff bill while his opponent attacked it, it is evident that the farmers of the Northwest have been grossly misrepresented by the coalitionists who attempted to split the Republican party and destroy the prosperity of American industry.

NOISE VS. HEALTH.

Research into the detrimental effects of noise is reaching a point where it demands public attention. The idea that only the sensitive person is injured by the metropolitan din of most cities has disappeared along with numerous popular myths. The actual damage to health and loss of efficiency occasioned by the screeching of street cars, the roar of motors, the blast of whistles and the monotonous droning of radios has been measured and found to be so serious as to warrant immediate action.

The most comprehensive study of noise and its effect upon the human brain has been made by the Noise Abatement Commission of New York. For six months the commission has been assembling scientific data as to the sources and consequences of noise. It finds that "the continual pressure of strident sound to which New Yorkers are subjected tends to produce impairment of hearing, to introduce harmful strains upon the nervous system leading to neurasthenic and psychasthenic states, to cause loss of efficiency in workers and thinkers, and finally to interfere so gravely with sound, refreshing sleep that rest is difficult and in some cases impossible."

Experts of the commission found that the bursting of an inflated paper bag raises the pressure of the brain higher than either morphine or nitroglycerine, which have been considered the most powerful agents for producing that effect. Long exposure to noise produces partial deafness. Muscles of the ear that are strained by a continuous din wear out and adaptation of the hearing apparatus to different sounds is no longer possible. Learning is retarded in both adults and children, and the degenerative processes of both the heart and arteries are increased by continual subjection to excessive noise.

The New York commission has been experimenting with a view to reduction of noise in that city, but its research will engage the attention of cities throughout the country. The downtown districts of every city are subjected to unnecessary racket. The vitality of men and women working under such conditions is broken down. They return home tired and are often unable to get needed rest because of the noisy environment in which they live. Such a waste of energy and such annoyance can not long be tolerated by a people that takes pride in its efficiency and living comforts.

Washington has been slow to respond to the demand that unnecessary noise be curbed. Now that the damage to health and efficiency has been scientifically established, it is time to get busy on an antinoise movement.

MAKING A MODERN HOME.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of New York's Governor, and Mrs. Thomas A. Edison have contributed to the news of the week by offering seasoned advice on problems of the home. Addressing a national radio audience, Mrs. Edison counseled women to return to their traditional role as homemakers, saying that women have lost prestige in their own field without making up for it by accomplishments on a par with those of men in the field of business. Mrs. Roosevelt pictured mankind as "still very much the slave of his own machine" and concluded that society is not making the best use of the advantages the new age has brought.

The comments of these women on this vital but commonplace subject deserve more attention than they received. The public often becomes so engrossed in the affairs of the moment that it fails to give adequate thought to the slow evolution that changes civilization. The home still has more influence on life than any other institution. What goes on in the homes of a nation is really more important than what its legislature does, or what its scientists discover.

There are many who lament the passing of the home life of the previous century and call for a return to "the good old days," apparently without realizing that that is impossible. The world has moved on; environment and conditions of life have changed. Little can be accomplished by trying to uphold obsolete ideals, or to perpetuate customs and institutions that are not in harmony with the current age. Such attempts always result in abnormalities. The true friends of humanity are those who comprehend the evolution that is taking place and readapt institutions and ideals to the new status of the individual.

Not many years ago the home was a center of economic and social activity. Today it has entirely lost its economic function, and the social function is passing. The real home builders of the future will supplant these lost ties with cultural and spiritual interests. They will re-create the social values of home. The ideal of self-discipline can be made to replace the stern repression of a former age. The nineteenth-century conception of a home fails to meet the requirements of modern society, but this is no reason why the home ideal should be allowed to disintegrate.

Mrs. Edison calls attention to the need of education for the woman who expects to preside over a home. This is more necessary, she says, than college training for the young man who enters business. Culture, taste, art, music and literature must be carried into the home to make it attractive. Where economic interests are diversified, a unity of purpose may be obtained on a different basis. If more attention were given the so-called failure of the home from this standpoint it would be a much less serious problem.

CONTROL OF PRICES

From the Wall Street Journal.

Brazilian interests are seriously considering the question of destroying about 4,500,000 bags of coffee in order to reduce an unmanageable surplus. As the United States has embarked on a plan of control of prices of agricultural products not much different from the Brazilian plan, this new development should be interesting, for it shows the road over which we must travel if we make a "success" of our plan.

Brazil produces about 70 per cent of the world's coffee, so it comes nearer to a monopoly of an essential commodity than the United States has with its cotton or wheat. Yet her coffee valorization plan proved a flat and costly failure. Not only in Brazil but in other countries production increased and now Brazil carries at times a surplus equal to a year's consumption. Price control worked as it always has worked and Brazil now is finding it a costly matter to extricate herself from the mess she made of it.

When the realization loan of about $100,000,000 was made the estimate was that the surplus remaining on hand at the end of the season—June 30, 1930—would be 16,500,000 bags. The plan was to liquidate that surplus by disposing of 1,650,000 bags every year for ten years. That was a very business-like plan even if the liquidation must be at a loss. But alas for estimates! It now appears that the new season beginning July 1 must carry not 16,500,000 but over 21,000,000 bags surplus coffee.

That is why there is talk of destroying about 4,000,000 bags of coffee after it has been produced. The situation is a ridiculous one, but it is the same as that toward which the United States is drifting. Change the name of Coffee Institute to Farm Board and you have the same thing. A large amount of cotton has been accumulated at a price higher than what it could be sold for now and it must be carried over to swell the surplus, while there is no present prospect of the current crop being less than world consumption.

Wheat has been accumulated at a price considerably above the world level and another crop equal to that of a year ago will be harvested. One way of price control has proved a failure and another method is being attempted, that of restricting production. The farmers have not yet said they would obey the call. If they did, it is probable that other countries would be delighted to hear them say so. But whatever way the board turns it will find the path of price control leads to the same jumping-off place that Brazil is hastening to.

As a theory, commodity price control sounds good and if one does not look beneath the surface can be made to appear plausible. But a little reasoning proves the fallacy and experience always confirms it. Wealth does not lie in producing commodities and then destroying them.

St. Louis Post Dispatch: Our idea of a high-powered salesman is one who could sell a pair of brass knucks to Gandhi or a dial telephone to a senator.

June Days in Texas.

Houston Post-Dispatch: Roasting ears, cantaloupes, strawberries, blackberries, dewberries on deck and watermelons coming up. Cape jasmines of days and night-blooming jasmines at night. The whole State of Texas resting with its belt tight and its olfactories tantalized and satisfied with perfumes such as were never known in Araby the blest.

Needless Noises.

Philadelphia Public Ledger: An active campaign of protest has been waged in this city by victims of excessive and needless noises. But it has not gone very much further than the protest stage. Of course, there is a law against the unnecessary tooting of automobile horns, but it is more honored in the breach than the observance, and there is no record of any tooter being brought to book.

The Noisy Senate.

Boston Transcript: Are the American people afraid of their own Senate? How much longer shall the members of that body be permitted to assume the role of dictatorial inquisitors and poke their noses into private affairs of the people which are none of their legitimate concern? A member of the United States Senate has only to propose a resolution to investigate somebody or something, for the obvious purpose of party or personal gain, to see it go sailing through without a word of protest from other members whose plain duty it should be to protect the people against such imposition.

RELATIVES.

Relatives are people who
Bring little presents in to you.
They're more like friends who come to call
Except you've got to learn them all
An' know their names, so you won't miss
When mother asks you: "Now, who's this?"

I've got two grandmas, and' I know
Them both becoz they love me so.
I know my grandpas, when they come
They bring me chocolate bars and gum.
You see how well I'm getting on
I also know my Uncle John.

Although I'm only half-past three
My daady says, it's good for me
To know so much. I never miss
The right name when they say: "Who's this?"
It would be awful not to know

You Can't Train a Child to Overcome Temptation by Locking Up the Jam.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

It is the nature of government to usurp authority.

Whether the rulers are kings or representatives chosen by a free people, the habit of exercising authority eventually brings them to the belief that they rule by right of superiority.

Once they develop this belief, they begin to assume rights and powers not specifically denied them and to resent all interference and opposition.

In time they become tyrants, and their rule is no less tyrannical when they hide behind the anonynity of democracy.

In a "free" land the people could prevent usurpations of authority if they would, but they are busy about their private affairs and content to leave public business to the professional politician so long as they are permitted to prosper in peace.

When those in authority are disposed to assume greater powers and those who are governed make no effort to prevent such assumptions, the inevitable result is a gradual destruction of liberty.

Laws multiply until every detail of existence is regulated by statute, and there is no work left for man's conscience.

"The best governed country is the least governed."

Soldiers are much governed and thereby lose their sense of personal responsibility.

They obey their immediate superiors; and having thus obtained a sense of security in well-doing, they throw off the moral restraints that hold other men in check and carouse with a clear conscience.

As character can not be developed without temptations to overcome, neither can moral fiber be developed without personal responsibility.

Every law that assumes responsibility for the citizen's moral conduct lessens his need of self-discipline and thus weakens his character.

A land wholly ruled by prohibitive laws is not a land of righteous people, but a land in which statutes take the place of conscience.

In the building of character there is no substitute for personal responsibility.

Criminal laws there must be, for the control of society's enemies, but to give moral laws the support of statutes is to relieve man of personal responsibility—to destroy his freedom of choice—and thus to deprive him of the only experience that can develop moral strength.

"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Impossible to Take the Tariff Out of Politics—Commission Is in Politics, No Matter How Formed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Once more the welkin is made to ring with the cry, "Take the tariff out of politics." For threescore years that cry has been raised whenever a tariff law has been under consideration. There was a time when the tariff did divide the parties, one sailing under the flag of "tariff for revenue only," the other carrying a banner on which was inscribed, "Protect our infant industries."

In those days the minority always opposed the measure of the majority. Occasionally some one individual would break away, as Sam Randall did, but, as a rule, the majority supported and the minority opposed without asking any questions. Then began the cry for taking the tariff out of politics. The cry increased in volume, until a few years ago a Congress determined to divorce the ill-assorted pair. To accomplish this a Tariff Commission was set up with broad powers to arrange a tariff plan on a scientific basis, the root being the difference in cost of production between the United States and other countries.

To the dismay of the good people the act creating the commission had a little joker concealed. It was constituted from the two parties, and it divided on party lines just as Congress divided. Congress put the commission as well as the tariff into politics.

The new commission is to be bipartisan, but politics will rule it as it has ruled former commissions. You can't take the tariff out of politics.

POLITICUS.

Old American Does Not Quite Approve of Cal Coolidge's Crack at Nationalism.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: When I was a kid—away back in the halcyon days when grown-ups were wont to call me "bub"—the sound of firecrackers on the Fourth of July was inspiring. Their crack gave even my young soul a sense of nationality.

Reaching manhood the feeling of pride in my nationality became well defined and I had a distinct mental picture of the United States as a shining example to the rest of the world. And up to recent years the thought never entered my head that our great and glorious Union might after all be isolated so far as the rest of the world is concerned.

But now comes former President Coolidge and in a front-page editorial in The Post of July 4, he says:

"We are bound to a common destiny through a common brotherhood. The path of glory does not lie in a sordid individualism, a perverted independence, or a narrow nationalism."

Talk like this is to be heard on every hand, uttered by public men, college professors, diplomats and others who opine that the path of glory lies across the Atlantic in the interest of world peace. To me it sounds impractical and reckless. Maybe I am too set in my ways; but as I grow older the fear of entangling foreign alliances increases.

The sound of the nationalistic firecrackers of boyhood still rings in my ears, and, indeed, Mr. Editor, it would be a sad state of affairs if in my second childhood I should find delight in the wisecrackers of internationalism.

OLD AMERICAN.

League of Nations Agency Would Like to Internationalize American Labor, But Self-Government Stands in the Way.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why Uncle Sam should stop, look, listen, when messages of world peace are wigwagged overseas from the League of Nations is to be seen in the annual report of Albert Thomas, director of the International labor office of the league.

Mr Thomas thinks the American Federation of Labor should become an integral part of the International Federation of Trades Unions. The thing that worries him a whole lot is that, as long as we are true to the principle of self-government, our European brothers can not work together with us for the good of mankind, because it "might create a clash of principles and so make the necessary reapprochement more difficult."

You see the fate of "the necessary rapprochement" depends on whether or not we become out and out internationalists. It will have a long time to wait.

What the report says about the American attitude is headed, "The United States as a Brake on Progr[illegible] I think I can hear American l[illegible] giving him the "razz" on that.

WORKINGMAN.

Unjust Average Ruling Fails to Bring Relief Under Correction of Welch Act.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The chaos in the wage scale of the Federal employes resulting from the misapplication of the Welch act in 1928 is not remedied by the recent partial correction. The Federal employes are still laboring under the handicap of the unjust average ruling and the only remedy is the installation of a yearly automatic increase in the grades in the same manner as that which is used in the policemen and firemen's pay scale. In dealing with large numbers of employes in the clerical, administrative and fiscal classifications a great deal of injustice is created, and a consideration for the large mass of employes must be exercised, instead of improving the lot of a few that are considered too good for their rating and not good enough for a higher rating. Splitting hairs is a petty means of improvement. A $100 a year increase from the minimum amount to the maximum amount, automatically every year, with a general increase of $300 in the maximum grade, is the only systematic manner of correcting a great deal of injustice.

STEEL MERGER SUIT HINTS HIDDEN ITEM

WITNESS DEFENDS ACTS

Youngstown, Ohio, July 8 (A.P.).—Attorneys for stockholders opposed to the merger of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation intimated today the latter concern concealed an item of $5,000,000 in its 1929 property report for "good will."

The intimation was made while James A. Campbell, 76-year-old veteran chairman of the board for the Youngstown company, testified as a hostile witness in the injunction suit in Mahoning County Common Pleas Court to prevent completion of the merger.

Harry Crawford, one of the attorneys for the plaintiffs, handed Campbell the Bethlehem balance sheet for 1929 and asked if he knew the good will item was there.

Not in Youngstown Report.

Campbell replied he did not, but that if it was, there was "probably some good purpose." Crawford then reminded him he had previously testified the Youngstown company listed no such item because he did not believe in it.

Attorneys for the plaintiffs seek to show that officers of the Youngstown company concealed from their stockholders the true values of the two concerns when they recommended the merger.

Campbell told the court he was responsible for the negotiations which led to the merger, taking the steps "to protect the interests of stockholders and employes."

It has been charged by attorneys representing Myron C. Wick, jr., and the International Shares Corporation, stockholder plaintiffs, that Campbell and Harry G. Dalton, the latter a director of the Youngstown company, and a partner in Pickands, Mather Co., dominated the Youngstown directors and forced the merger because of other interests.

Campbell was the first witness to take the stand in the trial, which was resumed today after an eight-day adjournment caused by the suicide of Leroy A. Manchester, general counsel for the Youngstown Company, last June 27.

Although he had made deposition to the effect he had been promised a position of dignity with the Bethlehem Corporation the veteran steel man reversed this testimony on the stand and said he had merely assumed from a remark of President Eugene G. Grace of Bethlehem that he would have been a member of the board after the merger.

Campbell Is Irritated.

At one point the witness became irritated by the examination of Attorney Crawford, who compared meticulously his statements in depositions with those from the stand.

In defense of the merger, Campbell testified the Youngstown company had to do something to keep out of serious financial trouble.

The plaintiffs, reputedly backed by Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland capitalist, seek to prove that negotaitions with the Bethlehem Corporation were carried on without real representation for the Youngstown company, and that the merger voted by the stockholders April 8, 1930, was carried through "fraud and intentional concealment."

In addition to attacking the manner of negotiating, the stockholders opposing the merger have attacked the legality of the stock voted in the April meeting.

PARLIAMENT ATTACK PARRIED BY TARDIEU

Wins in Senate by Only Five Votes on Question of Religion in Schools.

53 MARGIN IN CHAMBER

Paris, July 8 (A.P.).—Twice during the same day and once in each house of parliament, the government of Andre Tardieu, premier of France, withstood energetic assaults of its opponents and came out victorious. Its margin was the narrowest in the senate, where it prevailed by only five votes.

The clash in the senate was provoked when the opposition raised the question of laicization of schools in the department of Gers. Religious instruction has for a long time been banished from the schools, but the religious issue is often raised for political purposes. The leaders of the opposition cleverly utilized the question today in an effort to detach from the government those moderate radicals who are faithful to the idea of excluding religion from public education and of rendering all grades of instruction free for everybody.

The vote required verification. When it was announced before the official recount that the government had a majority of only ten, the whole Senate was in a state of turmoil. Several senators changed their votes, and when the official result was announced the government was found to have been sustained by 140 against 135 votes.

When the news arrived in the Chamber of Deputies that the government was in difficulty in the Senate, groups of the opposition became active.

The closeness of the vote encouraged the leaders to make an attack on their own account. They proposed a resolution demanding that the government accord special furlough to all farmers' sons in the army.

M. Tardieu posed the question of confidence and won by a majority of 53, the supporters of the government rallying 328 votes against the 265 votes of the opposition.

Last Rites Given To Vannutelli

Dean of Cardinal College Suffers Relapse as Heart Weakens.

Vatican City, July 8 (A.P.).—Cardinal Vannutelli, dean of the Sacred College, who has been seriously ill from an attack of uremic poisoning, this morning received the holy communion and extreme unction.

The aged cardinal, who is 93 years old, overtaxed his strength in church ceremonies on Ascension Day and became very ill yesterday. In the evening he was reported somewhat improved, but during the night his heart weakened.

After receiving the last sacraments Cardinal Vannutelli asked that the Pope send him the apostolic benediction. Pope Pius, through Mgr. Pazzardo, papal undersecretary of state, replied that he gladly acceded to the request and was praying fervently for the cardinal's recovery.

Trotzky Wins Suit Over His Memoirs

Refusal to Surrender Them After Kerensky Book Upheld by Court.

Dresden, Germany, July 8 (A.P.).—The Karl Reissner Publishing Co. lost its appeal against a verdict of the lower courts whereby Leon Trotzky, exiled Soviet leader, was exonerated from Reissner's charge of having violated a book contract.

Before being exiled from Russia, Trotzky had disposed of the rights to his memoirs to Reissner. On learning, however, that Reissner previously had published a work by Alexander Kerensky, chief of the Russian government before the Bolshevik revolution, in which Trotzky and Lenin were virtually accused of treason, he declined to surrender his memoirs.

"Mother" Jones Felicitates Rockefeller, 91 Years Old

Tarytown, N. Y., July 8 (A.P.).—The years, whose irresistible march few human enmities can withstand, completed yet another victory today as John D. Rockefeller on his ninety-first birthday received a congratulatory message from his one-time bitter foe, "Mother" Jones, labor leader.

Less than a score of those patient, invincible years have passed since "Mother" Jones went to jail after her denunciation of the Rockefellers—a denunciation delivered in the white heat of her wrath that flamed up during the Colorado mine wars.

And John D. Rockefeller is 91, a mild and benevolent old gentleman, who dispenses millions of dollars and hundreds of bright new dimes as he lives on toward the century mark.

So, today, from Silver Spring, Md., to Pocantico Hills, N. Y., came the following message that only time could make possible:

"Congratulations on the arrival of your ninety-first birthday. Thank God, we have some men in the world as good as you. We never needed them as much as we do today. Most sincere wishes that you may be blessed with many more."

The Rockefellers made the first move in the peace that was finally concluded today. On her 100th birthday a few weeks ago, "Mother" Jones received a telegram of felicitation from John D. Rockefeller, jr., and, in expressing her appreciation for the message, she revealed the fact that once several years ago he had invited her to his home for dinner.

His wire from "Mother" Jones and the compliment paid him in a radio speech last night by the Prince of Wales, who said he hoped that England would produce a philanthropist like him, were the high spots of John D. Rockefeller's ninty-first birthday.

But, so far as he was concerned himself, it was just another day, quietly passed in the seclusion and the routine which he loves. There was golf in the morning at Pocantico Hills, a drive about the estate in the afternoon, and a family dinner party in the evening.

And the few who saw him observed that, if he keeps his present health, the wish of "Mother" Jones, that he be blessed with many more birthdays, will most certainly be fulfilled.

Neely Democrats' Choice for Senate

Raskob Rapped by Candidate as He Quits West Virginia Race.

Huntington, W. Va., July 8 (A.P.).—Former Senator M. M. Neely, of Fairmont, was left unopposed for the Democratic nomination for United States senator at the August primary today by the withdrawal of George S. Wallace, Huntington, as candidate.

In withdrawing, Mr. Wallace said: "Neely is entitled to this nomination without a fight." He added that a number of Democrats are "falling over themselves in an effort to attract the wet vote to the Democratic party," and said John J. Raskob, Democratic national chairman, was one of a group of men "who are not Democrats, but who simply desire to use the party as an instrument for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment."

"Senator Neely is dry and will not join the forces to repeal the eighteenth amendment," Mr. Wallace said.

Russian Lumber Gains U. S. Entry

Convict Labor Production Not Proved, Lowman Says in Ruling.

(Associated Press.)

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Lowman ruled yesterday that six shiploads of Russian lumber imported by the A. C. Dutton Lumber Co. at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., should be admitted to this country as it had not been proved that it was produced by convict labor.

Two shiploads of the lumber arrived at Poughkeepsie and Providence, R. I., last week and were denied entrance by customs officials under the tariff act which provides that articles produced wholly or in part in any foreign country by convict labor shall not be entitled to entry. Four other shiploads of lumber are on the high seas and Lowman instructed customs collectors that they also should be admitted unless instructions to the contrary were issued in the meantime.

Lowman's decision was the result of a hearing held Monday at which importers of pulp wood and the Amtorg Trading Corporation, the Russian commercial organization, testified the lumber had not been produced by convict labor.

Senor de Oca To Be Feted By Officials

Mexican Finance Chief Will Sojourn in Capital.

By JEAN ELIOT.

"A LION a day keeps boredom away." This might be Washington's paraphrase of the old saw about the apple and the doctor. To be sure, they don't come quite every day, but we have been entertaining distinguished visitors at the rate of at least one a week of late, with a round of official entertaining for each giving fresh impetus to the waning season.

The next to come will be the Minister of Finance of Mexico, Senor Don Luis Montes de Oca, who will arrive in town this morning and will be at the Mayflower for several days. The Secretary of State, Mr. Henry L. Stimson, will entertain at luncheon today in his honor at the Pan-American Union and tomorrow the Ambassador of Mexico, Senor Don Manuel Tellez, will give a luncheon at the embassy for his distinguished compatriot. Presumably Senor Montes de Oca will be received by President Hoover while he is in Washington and it may be that Secretary Mellon of the Treasury, whose department corresponds with Mexico's ministry of finance, will entertain for him.

The Mexican Ambassador is remaining in Washington indefinitely, one of a small group of diplomats who continue to season life in Washington with a cosmopolitan flavor. He naturally isn't discussing the project, but with President Hoover contemplating a visit to Mexico when—or if—his duties permit, it seems probable that Senor de Tellez is standing by in order to be ready to accompany the presidential party to Mexico City. When Mr. Dwight W. Morrow, United States Ambassador to Mexico, returned to his post recently he announced that he was confidently hoping that President Hoover would be able to visit Mexico City before he returned to this country in September.

At all events, Senor and Senora de Tellez are lingering on in town, and the cool and spacious Mexican Embassy atop the Sixteenth street hill is an oasis in something approaching a diplomtic desert.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Christie Jameson have returned from their honeymoon, spent motoring through Canada, and will occupy the home of Mr. Jameson's parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

GLADIOLUS, PHLOXES AND HARDY LILIES.

PERHAPS the greatest problem for the owner of a small garden, when growing gladiolus, is where to plant them. Most amateurs have the idea that it is impossible to grow these bulbs unless you can offer them a spot that is sunny throughout the entire day. Now, while we have to admit that the gladiolus flowers that receive the prizes at the fall flower shows are no doubt grown in sun, this does not mean that good blooms can not be grown in a garden which has only five hours of direct sunshine. Of course, the less sun they receive, the more cultivation and the more food they must have.

If your garden boasts a perennial border, that will be the best place for your gladiolus. Always arrange them in groups rather than in rows. Just at this time the plants must be kept free of weeds. They also demand a great deal of moisture in July and August; the ground about them must be well soaked twice each week. Remember, when watering gladiolus, that the feeding roots are under the bulbs and that unless the water reaches them it is of little avail. It is useless merely to sprinkle them; in fact, this method of watering does more harm than good, as it helps to cake the upper layers of the soil. When the soil does cake it should be immediately broken up with a hoe or a rake. The soil must be kept loose at all times if the plants are to develop perfect blooms.

Phloxes, especially at this time, require frequent watering. It is advisable in midsummer to apply a mulch to aid in conserving the moisture. Keep the grass away from the roots, as if you do not the grass will get all the moisture and the deeper roots of the phloxes will get none. These plants should be lifted and divided once in three years. Be sure to cut the plants back as soon as the first display of flowers is over; with this treatment you should have a second crop of bloom before fall. Should your plants during a damp season become attacked by mildew, spray them with bordeaux mixture or blow some sulphur well up under and over the foliage. Red spiders, which are apt to attack phloxes, can soon be eradicated if the forceful stream from the garden hose is applied directly against the foliage.

During the hot weather of July and August your hardy lilies will require careful treatment. They should have a heavy mulch of lawn clippings brought well up around the stems. As a rule they do not require staking, as the stalks send out surface roots which act as a brace to the plant and hold it in place.

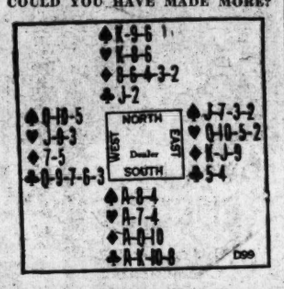
All readers' questions on growing and care of indoor and outdoor flowers and floral decorations for social functions will be answered by Miss Kift, directly in this column if addressed in care of The Washington Post, or directly to readers if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is supplied.

WORK ON BRIDGE

COULD YOU HAVE MADE MORE?



With the above hand South would obtain the contract with a bid of one No Trump or three, depending upon whether the game were Auction or Contract.

The hand was played at Auction and West led the Six of Clubs. Declarer, applying the rule of Eleven, subtracted the number of pips on the card led (6) from 11 and found the remainder to be 5; consequently he knew that there were just five Clubs higher than the Six not in the hand of the leader. As he saw them all in his two hands, he knew that East had no Club higher than the Six and consequently that South's Eight could win the trick; therefore he kept his Jack in dummy, and to trick 2 South led a Spade which dummy won. Then a Diamond was led from dummy and South's Ten finessed. When that won, dummy was put in with a Heart and South took another Diamond finesse which again succeeded. After that, Declarer led South's Ace of Diamonds and then attempted to put dummy in by leading the Ten of Clubs. West won that trick with the Queen and thereafter Declarer made only his three Aces and his King of Clubs, winning two Spades, two Hearts, three Diamonds and three Clubs.

Two good Diamonds in the dummy hand died for lack of an entry. Could they have been salvaged?

THE CORRECT PLAY.

The Declarer overreached himself when he deduced that South's Club Eight could win the first trick. The deduction was quite correct, but an extra dummy entry was needed and the first trick should have been taken in dummy with the Club Jack. Then with dummy's two Kings for second and third entries, two Diamond leads could have been made from that hand for the two finesses, and dummy could have been put in a third time to cash two long Diamonds after South's Ace had captured East's last Diamond.

Played in that way, Declarer would have won two Spades, two Hearts, five Diamonds and tthree Clubs; a total of twelve tricks.

AN INTERPRETER of the MODE

"Rose Dans La Nuit"—a gray chiffon summer evening frock printed in pale pink roses. (Courtesy of Jane Ragny, Paris.)

Paris, July 8.

A SINGLE piece of beautiful jewelry is extremely smart these days as the sole trimming of an elegantly cut evening gown. Something like the large brooch of orilliants I have illustrated up in the left-hand corner, for instance.

A piece of jewelry like this is more or less of an investment, particularly if it is fashioned in a style of intrinsic beauty which precludes the possibility of it ever being old-fashioned. Nor need these lovely ornamental brooches or necklaces be of real stones, even though their price in imitation stones very often amounts to hundreds of dollars.

And how well do they suit the lovely frocks of one tone, that depend solely upon line and silhouette for elegance, or for trimming resorts to those trimmings styled "self-trimming!" This means, as it tries to express, trimming that consists of tucks, pleats, narvures, decoups, incrustations of the same material of which the dress is fashioned.

In crepes, an occasional satin and chiffon, these dresses grace the summer mode. In more formal satins and velvets, the winter mode. And many a clever woman with distinctive features or personality wears this type of a dress in preference to one showing color combination or trimming of any kind, simply knowing that the plainer a really beautiful dress, the better it frames her.

And then the single piece of jewelry pinned where it is the most effective lends to the garments its real touch of luxury.

Jane Regny is another couturier who has a flare for youthful lines and manages to impart to even a gracious evening gown like the one I have illustrated for you today, a youthful flare. And then, of course, it being in gray and pink printed chiffon helped out a lot. I selected for the wearer jewelry of shadowy white moonstones and pink jades, and a deeper rose shades of gloves.

• • • •

It isn't the stamped, self-addressed envelopes that count, but the letters that come in addressed to us that show our deah de-e-elightful editor how popular we are. So thinking that you might, if you were a brunette or either one of the Demi-types, feel like having an extra leaflet this week telling you what colors you should wear and which you should avoid, we up and made the leaflet—and hope that you won't find it too much trouble to address an extra letter for it.

• • • •

You know you can be making cuning things for the kiddies while both you and they are at the summer resort—and they never do have enough clothes, do they? Better send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet which tells you how to make a smart summer hat for a boy or girl, a beach robe for Sonny, a bathing suit for the wee fellow, play overalls for either a boy or girl, and a couple of other unusual and practical summer garments. You'll like them, I'm sure!

Here's the reminder: Dare's weekly fashion letter is in The Washington Post every Sunday.

What Today Means to You

"CANCER."

IF July 9 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 6 a. m. to 7:30 a. m., 2 p. m. to 3:30 p. m. and 6 p. m. to 7 p. m. The danger periods are from 11 a. m. to noon, and 4 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Providence will play more than a minor part in your life on this date, and must be reckoned with in most of your plans, many of which will be altered to suit her likes and not yours. Neither borrow nor lend and make no uncertain investments.

The child born on this July 9 will have a daring nature, will be full of pranks and a desire for adventure. It will cause its parents much worry, but it will be sure to come through with flying colors. It will have considerable pluck and ingenunity.

During the days of your youth you were probably classed by your elders as one of the "bright young people." You may even have been the leader of a gang, who were harmlessly out for adventure and got it. You shocked your less daring associates or maiden aunts. You had, and still have, a superabundance of pluck and the possession of good nerves. You are a concocter of brilliant ideas, which you move heaven and earth to make realities. You have a flair for "getting away with things," which might be described as personality.

To achieve the impossible has always been your aim, and to do things which other people can not do. You have a spirit which does not give a hang for anything, and which enables you to overcome apparently insuperable obstacles. You play a hard game of life, but a square one. Your nerves are of steel, but your heart is of gold. You do not even mind being "worked" by those whom you love—but others had better not try it. You have never been obsessed with the serious things of life. You want color, life, laughter and fun. You want nothing, however, at another's expense. Your friends are legion. They are your biggest asset. You are willing to gamble away your own life, but you try not to "rope in" others.

Successful people born July 9:
James M. Peck, lawyer.
John C. Calhoun, financier.
Harold Richard Atteridge, playwright.
Franz Boas, professor Columbia.

Der Goofus Ge-zoont-hite

(Suggested by A. E. Man, Ph.D., New York)

Except for his whiskers and specs.
He lives in a cavern
Resembling a tavern
And eats only pinochle decks.
He's very romantic—in fact he gets frantic
Whenever he thinks about love;
A careful old fella
He keeps an umbrella
Below him as well as above!

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

RHEUMATISM AND ARTHRITIS.

D. O. W. asks about rheumatism and arthritis.

REPLY.

There are many diseases which go by the name of rheumatism. The term arthritis means an inflammation of a joint. There are many kinds of arthritis. Therefore, we do not mean anything definite when we speak of a person as having rheumatism or arthritis and do not specify what kind we mean. And yet these general terms are in wide use. It is customary to speak of rheumatism and arthritis without qualifying with any adjective. For this, nobody can be blamed. In the present state of our information, if we used an adjective it would be misleading about half the time. Not even the specialists in rheumatism—the leaders—are equipped to lead. They are not ready to agree as to the causes of the several kinds of rheumatism, nor how many kinds there are, nor what should be done to prevent them beyond some minor points to do more by way of cure than to meet symptoms. So long as they are floundering, we must expect others to flounder, and yet, next to the common cold and its kinsmen, the rheumatism family is the great cause of sickness, absence from work and general disability.

A London letter to the Journal of the American Medical Association says the rheumatic disorders caused one-sixth of the invalidism among workingmen. It cost $10,000,000 dollars a year in sick benefits, and is responsible yearly for a loss from work of 3,000,000 weeks.

Acute inflammatory rheumatism, or rheumatic fever, is regarded as an infection. A few physicians claim to be able to diagnose it bacterially and to have an antioxin for it, but even here there is some disagreement. But the great lack of agreement is in the chronic forms of arthritis. How many are there? What are their natures? What can be done to cure them? To prevent them? By what names should they be known? There are no accepted answers to any of these questions. In consequence, we are not even started on the prevention of this large and disabling group of disorders.

TREATING HAY FEVER.

Mrs. C. C. B. writes: I have lived with hay fever for 31 years and get along with it much better than in earlier years. By taking a tablespoonful of castor oil every night during the hay fever I escape the asthma part. Of course, castor oil will never be a popular preventive of asthma, and I must acknowledge that I let several seasons pass without using it after I heard of its beneficent qualities. I also found that for months afterward my digestion was better than before taking it. I have never taken it for more than four weeks, although, of course, hay fever remains for longer than that, but that sees me through the worst of it.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

Overwrought Nerves.

DEAR Miss McDonald—I have a father who is simply unfit to live. He is untrue to my mother and admits it, shames me by appearing publicly in restaurants and dance places where I and my friends see him with the person he takes around. Mother, of course, does not know I see them but he knows and yet continues to go there. Then he attempts to tell me what to do and how to act. Forbids me to see a certain man just because this fellow one night at this place took a little too much liquor. I happen to know, too, that my father is a thief. He was not prosecuted as my grandfather came to the rescue with $10,000 and saved him from jail. They think I do not know this, but I know the whole thing. My aunt told me all about it once when they wanted mother to leave him.

Now I am not yet of age, but I want to marry the man he objects to, and I do not want him to have the satisfaction of having us parted. What State can we be married in? I mean where would it be legal for us to marry? The man is of age. In fact he is 35. We nearly did it last night, only it started to pour rain and I got depressed and just couldn't.

I am an only child and I have one awful life and always have had. Mother is always off by herself crying. He just comes home to dress. Calling girls up right on our phone. Mother and I taking messages from all kinds of people for him. I have heard him tell mother that it was O. K. with him anytime she wanted to pack. She would pack quick enough if I were out of the way. And I want to get out—quick. And I have told him so. This is the first chance I have had. All the others were too young to marry anyone. But this man has enough to keep me, and a nice home. He was married before and has a little boy, but his wife has him. So mother can live with us. She does not know anything about our plans, however, as I want her to be able to say truthfully that she knew nothing about it when the fireworks start. She will get the blame anyway, and that is the one thing that makes me hesitate. Poor mother. She is only 36, and the "person" is every day of 40 and looks it.

Can you help me to avoid the trouble I know he will delight to make for us? He claims it is because he "loves" me that he carries on and makes life miserable for both mother and me when I go anywhere. But it is because he wants to go to these places and gets sore to meet me there. Mother thinks I would miss all the things he gives us if she were to divorce. But things do not mean that much to me. And, anyway, I have my mind made up to get married. All I want to know is how to do it and not be dragged back and held up to ridicule? SEVENTEEN.

Well, youngster, all I can say is that you are going to make matters worse—probably wreck your life. Why not be a good soldier and instead of running off with a man who takes "too much liquor" start in to be a comfort and real companion to your mother. It is a crime for a child of 17 to throw herself into marriage in the mood that is racking your spirit at this moment. Do not do it. Evidently your mother married at 17 and just between ourselves that may be the reason for your father's seemingly unexplainable conduct. People marry as children; tire of or outgrow each other, and spend the balance of their days regretting, and trying to forget.

You have no right to judge your father. After all, however misguided and reprehensible a man's own conduct may be, he is bound to feel concern when he sees his own daughter about to marry some one like himself. Stop judging him and hating him. He is a fellow human, and his weakness is his misfortune and his burden—not yours.

No one has everything in this life. And compared to the lot of thousands of girls, yours is a happy one. You have a mother who loves you, a father who provides for you both. If he is weak, that is his misfortune. Begin to play each day to be happy and make mother happy. Give up the thought of marriage, and all thoughts of hate. Be a woman. Be a good soldier. Be wise and gentle. And some day you will be glad that you were both.

KOTEX absorbs in a very wonderful way, which makes it especially comfortable in summer, when other forms of sanitary protection so quickly become uncomfortable and chafing.

Kotex is made of a remarkable substance known as Cellucotton (not cotton) absorbent wadding. This substance is very light, and very absorbent. It actually absorbs five times as much as an equal weight of cotton, or of any cotton material.

And Cellucotton absorbs away from the surface, preventing packing and chafing. This is why Kotex keeps its freshness and resilience so long.

Hospitals consider this point very important, because it makes a pad so very comfortable, and more hygienic as well. The great hospitals of America—85% of them—choose this same Kotex material for this reason.

And for the same reason millions of women find Kotex gives almost miraculous comfort in summer. It stays light, fluffy and delicate so much longer.

Always inconspicuous

Kotex is better for other reasons, too. It is never conspicuous under the thinnest dresses, because of careful designing, which eliminates all bulky corners.

And Kotex deodorizes. Safely, completely. You dispose of it as easily as a piece of tissue. Ask for Kotex in any drug or department store. Kotex Company, Chicago, Illinois.

KOTEX IS SOFT...

1—Not a deceptive softness, that soon packs into chafing hardness. But a delicate, lasting softness.

2—Kotex filler is far lighter and cooler than cotton, yet absorbs 5 times as much.

3—Deodorizes, safely, thoroughly by a special process.

Regular Kotex—45c for 12
Kotex Super-Size—65c for 12

SENORITA PARECIS SCORES AT CONCERT

BARYTONE, BAND HEARD

A Brazilian prima donna, Senorita Abigail Parecis, attired in the aboriginal costume of her native country, was the outstanding feature of the Latin-American concert given on the esplanade of the Pan-American Union Building last night. The program, representing many Latin-American composers, was presented by the United States Marine Band assisted by Senorita Parecis and Rodolfo Hoyos, Mexican barytone, as assisting artists.

The entire program was broadcast by radio and then rebroadcast by short wave to Pan-American countries.

Under the efficient baton of Capt. Taylor Branson, leader of the United States Marine Band, that renowned organization won new honors for itself last night. Four soloists from the band appeared on the program, Second Leader Arthur S. Witcomb who played Latin-American airs on his cornet; Winifred Kemp and Robert E. Clark in trombone and cornet duets, and Vibraphonist Wilbur D. Kieffer.

The United States Marine Band made a special hit in the first rendition in the United States of a grand selection from the opera, "Il Guarani," by M. Gomez, a Brazilian composer. Among the other outstanding numbers played by the band were "Native Dances," by Cervantes, a Cuban composer, and a Peruvian number, "El Condor Pasa," by M. Robles.

The first appearance of the prima donna was in a group of Brazilian folk songs in which Senorita Parecis accompanied herself on a guitar. Her voice is a dramatic soprano of glorious range, and she sings with artistry and a wealth of vocal expression.

The folk songs were well done and evoked an ovation for the young singer at their conclusion. Her greatest success, however, was her masterly singing of the aria from the opera "Il Guarani," when her picturesque costume and dramatic rendition added to the vocal beauties of her presentation of this difficult aria, heard for the first time in this country.

The other visiting artist, Senor Hoyos, had a mellow tone and a fine restraint in his control of his big voice in numbers requiring emotional emphasis.

THE GIRL IN THE AIR

By JULIE ANNE MOORE

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE.

Janet might easily have made all her preparations for the flight to Boston in ten minutes, but she took advantage of the opportunity to be alone and spent the early hours of the afternoon in her room. Mrs. Decker peeped in once to say she was going shopping and would Janet light the stove under the potatoes at about 5.

"Don't forget to buy that dress this time, Mud," Janet called after her. "I'll start a war when you come back if you haven't got it."

Hardly had Mrs. Decker closed the front door when Janet was startled to see Margaret walk into the room. "Marge, darling, you frightened me. Isn't there any school this afternoon?"

"None all day," Margaret informed her. "Visiting day for the teachers, thank goodness."

"Where were you when we were eating lunch?"

"In my room, writing."

"Writing what, Marge?"

"Letter. What you think, arithmetic?"

"Hmm! . . . Sarcastic with your sister now, eh? . . . Come here, Marge. You aren't still thinking about Fred, are you, honey?"

Margaret nodded slowly. "I can't help it, Jan . . . You were mighty sweet about it when I told you, Jan. I was expecting you to jump all over me."

"Don't be silly. Have I ever jumped all over you? . . . But I do want to talk to you about it, honey. Some one must wake you up, and I suppose I'm elected . . . How old are you, Marge?"

"As if you didn't know. I'm 17."

"And Fred?"

"It doesn't make any difference."

"Fred's 22, Marge; five years older than you."

"I wouldn't care if he was 25 years older than I am; I'd love him just the same."

"You think you would? . . . Well, we'll let that slide for the present. Now, honey, I'm going to tell you something that you may have a hard time understanding; but it's for your own good . . . Just because a girl goes with a boy doesn't mean she's going to marry him; but the best way I know to measure a man is to ask yourself if you would marry him. Have you asked yourself that about Fred?"

"Lots and lots, Jan, and I'd marry him tomorrow if I could."

"You little idiot! . . . But seriously, Marge, don't you want your husband to be a big, fine man with lots of ambition and energy and ideas; a man who will amount to something in the world?"

"Of course I do, and Fred's going to be, too. He's already invented something, and——"

"And that's the end of that. Fred's a good sort, Marge; don't forget I thought I was in love with him myself once. But he'll never be anything but a plain automobile mechanic."

"What difference will it make so long as he loves me? But Fred will be something better when he gets a break. They don't appreciate him down at the garage. If——"

"Oh, what's the use, Marge. Here I am trying to show you where you're making a mistake, and you can't begin to understand what I'm getting at. You're not in love, honey. You're just giving your emotions a workout on a dummy. . . . Oh, he's a dear, sweet dummy, I'll admit; but he hasn't the making of the kind of husband I'd like to see my little sister have, Marge. . . . But you're deaf, dumb and blind now, darling, and I could talk to the end of time and not convince you I'm trying to advise you for your own good. You have to consider other things besides love, Marge. If you're going to be happy, you've got to have money. . . . Fred hasn't a nickel outside of what's in his pocket."

"He has, too. He's got seventy-five dollars in the bank."

"It's hard to believe, Marge; but I apologize. . . . And how long could you and Fred live happily on seventy-five dollars?"

"We wouldn't have to live on it. He's got a salary, and when he sells his invention, we'll have piles."

"His salary isn't much, honey. I happen to know what it is; at least what it was two months ago. And selling these marvellous inventions is slow business. You don't want to live in one room for years and years, wearing old clothes, eating out of cans, envying every well-dressed, well-fed woman you see on the streets, do you?"

But Margaret seemed not to have heard the question. She said, puzzled: "I don't understand you, Jan. You talk like one of these gold diggers in the talkies; but I don't believe you mean it. Do you mean to tell me you wouldn't marry a man if you loved him, even if he didn't have any money?"

Janet saw immediately that Margaret had left the witness stand and that she herself was on it. She wanted to be absolutely honest with her sister, and yet . . . well, it was no easy matter to get her point across. "No," she said presently; "I wouldn't say that. But have you ever stopped to think that it's just as easy to fall in love with a millionaire as it is with a garbage collector? . . . You're thinking, Marge, that love is something mysterious that brings two certain people together; and unless they do come together, there'll never be any love for either. Aren't you?"

"Why, yes; I guess so. At least I think Fred and I were made for each other."

"All right. But it wasn't very long ago that Fred thought he and I were made for each other. What about that?"

"He was mistaken, that's all. Look how quickly he got over it when you threw him over."

Janet had a vague suspicion that she was hearing the truth, but she held to her course. "And what if he's making another mistake now? . . . But never mind about answering that. You'll say you know he isn't, and we'll get nowhere. . . . But suppose instead of Fred some handsome young man of social position and wealth had come along and given you the same kind of a line, Marge. You'd have fallen in love with him."

Margaret declared: "I would not. If all the handsome millionaires in the world came along, I'd still love Fred and nobody else . . . The trouble with you, Jan, is that you've let those rich fellows out at the field go to your head."

Janet winced. "There's only one rich young fellow out there, Marge," she said quietly; "and he's engaged. If I'm to look for a husband at the field, I'll have to take either a poor young man or an old, rich man."

"Yes," said Margaret with spirit, "and in spite of all you've been telling me, you'll take the poor young man, if you take either one."

"I hope, darling," Janet replied, smiling, "you won't be too much disappointed in me if I should make the other choice . . ."

When Margaret had gone, Janet moved about the room restlessly, looking for something to do, something to read, anything to keep from thinking. She knew that sooner or later she had to face the fact of Dick's loss and fight it out in her heart. But she dreaded the moment. She knew that when it came she would love him no less, and that the futility of wanting him would only make her want him the more. How hard life seemed. For years it had given her nothing; and then . . . everything . . . Only to take it all from her again.

Struggling against a desire to fall across her bed and give way to her emotions, Janet leaned over her shelf of books and read the title of each, "Winds of Desire" . . . "Reputation" . . . "An Interrupted Night" . . . "The Stenographers' Handbook" . . . "Gone Native" . . . "Practical Flight Training" . . .

The discovery of Henry Frenda's book sent a little chill of disgust over her. It was that book over which Henry and Belter had quarreled. If she had only given it to Henry the day he stopped her on the street, and if she had sent him directly to Belter with it . . . But she hadn't, and within a few hours Belter was dead. Murdered! . . . Had Henry—

She pulled the book roughly from its place, took a step back and sat on the edge of the bed. Almost unconsciously she turned immediately to the pencil notation in the back of the book.

These were not idle symbols; they meant something. Something of so much importance that Belter had threatened to fire Henry if he didn't return the book to him at once. Surely the book itself was of no great value. Interesting, no doubt, but no more so than the thousands of other copies that must have been printed with it.

No; it wasn't the book. She was quite satisfied that its importance rested in those mysterious letters and figures carelessly scrawled on one of its pages.

But what did they mean?

"wn—110"

No light. She went to the second:

"ww—215"

And, finally, the last:

"Vh ri Qb Dikkiq ojf dein vbj"

All Greek. Hieroglyphics. As meaningless as any conglomeration of letters and figures. . . . And yet they had to have a key. How did one go about finding a key for a mysterious code? No doubt there were experts on such matters. But the experts were no help now. Belter was dead.

"wn" . . . Watertown? Hardly. Washington? Perhaps, but what of it? She said the letters aloud over and over; but they meant everything and nothing without something to go with them.

What of the numerals "110" . . . "One hundred and ten . . . One hundred and ten." A street address? Perhaps; but what street? A date? Perhaps, but——

Janet suddenly threw the book face down on the bed and dashed across the room to tear a calendar from the wall. "One ten, one ten . . . January 10 . . . January 10 . . ."

January had been torn from the face of the calendar, but a small calendar for the year was printed on the cardboard under the leaves. Now what had happened on January 10 The 10th was Tuesday. Oh, if she could only think of something. Where was she on January 10?

She went hurriedly to the partially packed suitcase and took out her diary. . . . January 10 . . . She read in her neat script: "Really living at last. Fred proposed tonight. Sweet, sweet boy. But I'm too excited about the new job. Told him I'd have to think it over. Mud not persuaded yet, but hope I can drag Dad on my side in the morning. I've got to take this opportunity. Excitement already. Mr. Temple called tonight and said something had happened. Wonder what . . ."

Then Janet knew. Hugh had told her next day. One of their planes had been shot down, the one in which they were supposed to have made a shipment of money, but didn't. And then—Janet's hand holding the calendar shook violently—and then the money had been taken in Susie on that first trip she had made with Tolbert at the end of which Hugh and the money had disappeared.

That was it! That was it! She's found the key, and the significance was clear. Belter had been the inside man of the air bandits. Yes, and—revelation piling on revelation—he had sent that book to Crell, which meant that Crell——

But she turned back to the code anxiously. "wn" . . . It was all so simple now. "Wn"—Waterbury-New York. The money shipment was between Waterbury and New York. She was positive she had hit upon the key at last.

But that trip was over. What of the second date? Only it wasn't a date. Perhaps it had to do with the first entry. * * * No, she didn't think so. "Ww" * * * Waterbury—what? * * * It didn't matter now. What of the date?

"215" * * * She ran a trembling finger along the calendar. "215" * * * February 15 * * * What had happened on February 15? What, indeed * * *?

Margaret, coming down the stairs, heard her sister's strained voice:

"My God! THIS is the 15th!"

"Plymouth, 791 and quick!"

Margaret, only partially recovered from her amazement, crossed the room and stood by the plainly excited Janet. "Jan, honey * * * What's wrong?"

But Janet neither saw nor heard her. "Is this the airport? * * * Give me Mr. Temple! Make it snappy! * * * He isn't? He's what? * * * What kind of emergency? * * * Listen this is Janet Decker and I've got to know. What is it? * * * What? * * * Oh * * * I see."

Slowly, slowly she returned the receiver to its hook. Then suddenly she fell face down on the couch, crying.

"Janet * * *!" Margaret was frightened. "Jan * * * can't you tell me what's wrong?"

"Oh, Margie!" Janet sobbed. "I might have saved a man's life if I'd had the sense * * * but I waited too long * * * to wake up."

Fall of Stricken Cow Seriously Hurts Man

Chardon, Ohio, July 8 (A.P.).—Fred Wiman was seriously injured today when a cow he was milking died and fell on him.

Wheat Regulation Stressed by Hyde

Colorado, Nebraska Farmers Told Law of Supply and Demand Inflexible.

Sterling, Colo., July 8 (A.P.).—Land taxation at a point where farmers now pay more than $900,000,000 annually was referred to as an "important factor" in the present agricultural situation by Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, who today addressed a meeting of Colorado and Nebraska bankers and farmers.

"The surplus with which farm thinking must busy itself," said the secretary, "is that part of the crop which the market, domestic or foreign, can not absorb without disastrously breaking the price." Mr. Hyde said the American farmer can not and should not be compelled to meet the fierce competition of cheap labor and low standards of living in other countries.

Asserting the law of supply and demand is "as inflexible as it is inexorable," Mr. Hyde said agriculture has been breaking itself by violating its plain mandate; that it is necessary to regulate production of farm products to the limit of market demands, balancing production and at the same time limiting acreage. Chairman Legge, of the Federal Farm Board, renewed his attack on the proposed equalization fee, debenture plan and other proposals for taking care of the country's exportable wheat surplus.

Pratt Warns Radio Fans Against Too Much Noise

Loud protests voiced from time to time by those who have not yet reached the supreme stage of radio-mindedness at last have brought results, and henceforth the District bids fare to be transformed into a silent haven of peace and tranquility.

In the daily bulletin of the Police Department, Maj. Henry G. Pratt, superintendent, yesterday impressed upon the members of the force the necessity for enforcing the regulation adopted last month forbidding the use "knowingly or wantonly" of any device or instrument "for the intensification of the human voice or of any sound or noise in any public or private place in such manner that the peace and good order of the neighborhood is disturbed."

DETROIT WILL VOTE ON MAYOR'S RECALL

Court Sweeps Aside Legal Objections and Sets Election Date July 22.

APPEAL NOT TO BE MADE

Detroit, July 8 (A.P.).—The administration of Mayor Charles Bowles today was made the subject of a referendum among Detroit's 430,000 registered voters, to be held July 22.

The date for the city's first mayoralty recall election was set by City Clerk Richard W. Reading this afternoon after Circuit Judge Robert M. Toms had removed the last legal obstacle to such a vote. His ruling brought to an end a fortnight of litigation during which the mayor and his supporters sought to prevent the election by every legal means.

Judge Toms' ruling dissolved a temporary restraining order issued against the city clerk yesterday on the strength of a suit brought by the mayor. An earlier injunction action, brought by a group of "taxpayers" in behalf of the mayor, was defeated yesterday when the Michigan Supreme Court upheld the decision of Circuit Judge Arthur Webster denying them the writ they sought.

The mayor's attorneys indicated today that they would not attempt an appeal from this latest adverse ruling.

Events moved quickly in today's litigation. Shortly after Judge Toms opened the hearing on the mayor's suit, counsel for Walter B. Cary, chairman of the recall committee, succeeded in introducing their client as a party defendant with the city clerk. They also moved for a dissolution of the injunction and proceeded to offer arguments in its behalf.

After hearing their arguments the court acceded to their request and informed the mayor's attorneys there was no need of their arguing the matter further.

Mayor Bowles' suit attacked the recall on three points, first that there were forgeries on the recall petitions and that less than the required number of valid signatures had been secured; second, that the recall act was unworkable and therefore unconstitutional, and, third, that the recall petitions should be dismissed by the city clerk.

While these arguments were being heard in circuit court John Gillespie, commissioner of public works, and recognized leader of the fight against the recall, collapsed in the offices of the council. The commissioner had just finished a long speech to the council on grade separations. Taken to receiving hospital and examined, Gillespie was pronounced in no serious danger. His collapse was attributed to a stomach disorder.

EGYPTIAN SITUATION CAUSES UNEASINESS

Mansourah Is Still Restive After Clash in Which Six Were Killed.

49 PERSONS WOUNDED

Cairo, July 8 (A.P.).—Egypt's internal political dissensions today assumed a threatening and warlike aspect.

Six persons were killed and 49 wounded at Mansourah in a violent clash between supporters of Nahas Pasha, Wafd leader, who recently resigned the premiership, and troops and police. The town was tonight still in a state of ferment, but was officially stated to be well under the control of the authorities.

The rioting started after the automobile of Nahas Pasha, with 20 or 30 Nationalist students clinging to it, burst through a police cordon barring the way. It was brought to a dead stop by a line of Egyptian soldiers with fixed bayonets. Mansourah is a hotbed of Nationalist sentiment and a Wafd stronghold and the action of the troops quickly brought on the riot.

A volley of stones and bottles filled with sand was hurled into their ranks by the Nationalist crowd. Hand to hand fighting raged in front of Shinnawi Bey's house, where Nahas Pasha had lunched, and when it had continued for some time the police opened fire.

During the struggle, three police and soldiers and three rioters were killed. In injured the government side got much the worst of it, having 37 hurt against 12 for the nationalists.

Nahas Pasha and his party, including members of the Wafd executive committee, remained in Shinnawi Bey's house, until the time for the departure of their train. They returned to Cairo tonight.

Before the fighting started, a prominent member of the Wafd executive committee had informed the newspapers that despite a government order prohibiting the executive's use of the Delta Railways, the Wafd would do its utmost to hold its scheduled meeting in Mansourah.

Trouble has been threatening in the Egyptian political world since the resignation last month of Nahas Pasha and the subsequent prorogulng of Parliament by King Fuad. Ismail Sidky Pasha, the new premier, recently announced that the government would use strong measures to repress the speechmaking activities of the Wafd, which he said threatened the public peace.

Baltimore Boy Hurt In Home-Made Plane

Baltimore, July 8 (A.P.).—A boy aviator was slightly injured today when the airplane he had made at home fell after it had reached an altitude of about 5 feet. Philip Dytsky, 16, who, with two companions, constructed the ship in the basement of his home, was taken to a hospital.

The youthful would-be aviator took the ship to a field in a suburb today for a trial flight. He had gotten but a few feet off the ground when the ship fell. The plane, powered with a four-cylinder gasoline motor and having a wing spread of 12 feet, was not badly damaged.

WELL, HE'LL NEVER MAKE IT

Light and tempting food FOR SUMMER — but it must be nourishing!

"GIVE us something light for supper, Mother; it's too hot for a heavy meal." So say the children—and so says Father, too. Yet Mother knows that little bodies must be nourished in summer as well as in cooler seasons—and adults need sustaining food all the year 'round.

Sauce from the Natural Juices

Blended with a sauce of luscious ingredients — of tomatoes, other fresh vegetables and zesty whole-milk cheese, it contains essential elements for promoting sturdy growth and creating buoyant health. It is light, fluffy and easy to digest. It actually does "melt in your mouth."

No Coloring Used

The rich, tasty sauce in which MUELLER'S COOKED SPAGHETTI comes, derives its consistency entirely from the ripe tomatoes, other fresh vegetables and fine old cheese used in making it. Not a drop of "filler," artificial coloring or preservative is added.

More Leisure Hours for YOU

Best of all, this delightful food comes to you already cooked. The work has all been done for you in sunlit kitchens under the most modern sanitary conditions. You need only heat the can, open it and serve — the work of minutes instead of hours. Keep half a dozen cans of MUELLER'S COOKED SPAGHETTI in your pantry at all times. You will find them most handy whenever you wish to serve a delicious, balanced meal in the shortest time. Ask your grocer for MUELLER'S COOKED SPAGHETTI. He has it or can get it for you.

MUELLER'S COOKED SPAGHETTI EN CASSEROLE WITH LEFT-OVER MEAT

1 can MUELLER'S COOKED SPAGHETTI; 1½ cups left-over meat; 2 tbsps. melted butter; ½ tsp. salt; ⅛ tsp. pepper; ½ cup of buttered bread crumbs.

Remove cooked spaghetti from the can. Combine left-over meat, cut into small cubes, with melted butter, salt and pepper. Place layer of cooked spaghetti in well-greased casserole, then layer of left-over meat mixture. Alternate layers with cooked spaghetti on top. Cover with buttered bread crumbs and bake in moderate oven for 20 minutes.

Another simple way is to remove the cooked spaghetti from the can, place it in a baking dish, spread a few slices of bacon on top, and put in the oven to heat.

STUFFED GREEN PEPPERS

1 can MUELLER'S COOKED SPAGHETTI
6 green peppers
6 tablespoons grated cheese

Cut tops off the peppers, remove seeds and fibre. Stand in boiling water for 10 minutes. Drain. Then fill each pepper with the cooked spaghetti, cover the top with grated cheese.

Place peppers upright in a pan containing a small amount of hot water. Bake in moderate oven for 20 minutes.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

TOYS FOR CHILDREN.

(Children's Bureau, Department of Labor.)

Since a baby wants to put everything in his mouth, his toys must be those that can safely be used in this way. They should be washable and should have no sharp points or corners to hurt the eyes. Painted articles and hairy and woolly toys are unsafe, as are also objects small enough to be swallowed, and those having loose parts, such as bells and the like. Rubber toys, which may be washed, are excellent for a baby. Floating toys of celluloid are of great interest, but the baby will bite them to pieces unless he is watched.

A child should never have so many toys at one time as to distract his interest. He will be quite satisfied with a few things and a handful of clothespins, for example, will often please just as much as an expensive doll or other toy. It is an excellent plan to have a box or basket in which to keep empty spools and other household objects which will amuse the baby.

Among these articles are: A string of spools, a spoon, a pie tin to pound, a string of wooden beads, talcum powder box (empty).

Since everything goes into the baby's mouth, and all his toys are thrown on the floor, they should be frequently washed and, when possible, boiled to keep them sweet and clean.

Reno, Nev., July 8 (A.P.).—Mrs. Josephine Hutchins Bell, actress, formerly connected with the Eva Le Gallienne Theater in New York, has been granted a divorce here from Robert Bell, said to be a grandson of the late Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone.

The papers in the case were sealed, but it is understood today the decree was granted on grounds of mental cruelty. They were married August 12, 1924, in Washington, D. C., where Bell's mother lives.

2 PROS SET RECORDS WITH CARDS OF 69 IN U. S. OPEN PRACTICE

Sun-Hardened Fairways Make Course Much Easier.

By PAUL MICKELSON.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 8 (A.P.).—A scorching sun stopped even the mighty Bobby Jones and his generally accepted arch rivals for the national open golf championship during today's practice rounds at Interlachen, but served as an impetus for a pair of young professionals all but forgotten in the framing of the championship picture.

Two players who previously have been held to 75's and more walked off the eighteenth green this afternoon with the new course record, first Henry Ciuci, young pro from Stratford, Conn., and soon after Whitey Cox, Brooklyn, a product of the public links.

They bested by a single stroke the record set Tuesday by Bobby Jones, defending champion, and Leo Diegel, ranking professional. Par is 72, 36 strokes for each nine, but Ciuci shot the first half in 34, two under par, coming home one under. His result was obtained with only four birdies, as he shot par on every hole excepting one, one of the most consistent rounds recorded in the practices.

Cox Out in 33 With Three Birdies.

Cox opened with a pair of spectacular birdies after par on the first, with another birdie on the sixth for a 33 on the outgoing nine. That score for the distance has been beaten only once, by Walter Hagen, twice champion, who turned in a sizzling 32 late Monday, but whose pace broke on the home nine to return him par for the round. Cox, in common with Hagen and most of the entries, ran into great difficulties on the second nine, but turned in par 36, to earn his 69 for the round.

Gibson Dunlop, the young Princeton University star, who holds the national intercollegiate championship, indicated that the old timers will have to consider him in the championship play, when he turned in a 70, two under par, after two hours of play under a broiling sun. He was one under par on each nine.

Clear skies and an intense sun for a week has had its effect on the course. Gene Sarazen, former champion, banged out a 38 on the first nine today, and hurried back to the clubhouse to get away from the sun, reporting that the course is at least four strokes easier this week than last.

Approach Shots Hazardous.

The rough has dried out and the fairways have become harder, giving low but hard driven balls up to 50 yards additional advantage through long rolls. The greens, however, continue to give all but the expert approach shots plenty of trouble, bounding even high looped balls off into traps. Many of the greens are elevated, which has added to this difficulty.

Jones, still the top-heavy favorite to win the 72-hole medal play joust which starts Thursday, was content to let the heat have its way and merely loafed around. He teamed up with a foursome, which included Jimmy Johnston, of St. Paul, national amateur king, and spent most of the round experimenting. His game appeared slightly off, however, and while no accurate count was possible because of second and third shots from identical lies, he was several strokes over par figures at least when he walked lazily off the eighteenth hole.

Johnston played Minnekhada, a neighborhood course, in the morning, and was content with a 70 captured there, on Interlachen, along with Bobby, he appeared far off his game, shanking his irons and pulling slightly now and then off the tee.

SOME of the old-school members of this community still make the rather pardonable error of addressing or referring to John J. McGraw as Muggsy. This is a dangerous faux pas if committed within the hearing of the aforesaid McGraw. He is very sensitive on the subject and, although his most devoted friends have only apologies for his record as a fist fighter, there is always the possibility that he will lay in that right fist of his and leave one prostrate. After all these years of trying, McGraw might score with that right any day now.

Mr. McGraw was nicknamed Muggsy by his boyhood comrades around Olean, N. Y., and for the first 40 years of his life he thought this was an alright name for him. He gloried in it and derived royalties from it because the name characterized him and he characterized the Giants and people went to see them play because they were rough and tough and daring and quarrelsome.

But McGraw Advanced In Other Circles.

But as Mr McGraw grew older and progressed in the social, political and business set of New York it occurred to him the Muggsy was a discreditable name for one who was expected to sit at board meetings and banquet boards and serve on committees. The McGraws went to live in Pelham, a suburb where some of the people own yachts. The neighbors were known as Roy W. This and William W. That and it just seemed to him that he ought to be allowed to outgrow his nickname as the others had. Fun was fun, but it was no joke to be introduced as Mr. and Mrs. Muggsy McGraw.

So Mr. McGraw is not Muggsy any more, but John or Mac or Mr. McGraw.

This indicates how strong his character is. There was a time when only Teddy Roosevelt's nickname was better known than his, but now that name of Muggsy is only a reminiscence.

"Sleep-Out Louie," The Gambler.

There is a fellow around this town, engaged in the gambling business and very well off at the present moment, who is known as Sleep-Out Louie. Years ago Louie was not very well fixed, and in those days he slept in the chairs on the broad, cool verandas of the big hotels at Saratoga during the racing and faro season.

I was asking some of the old horse-track G. A. R.'s today if they could tell me Sleep-Out Louie's square name.

"Come to think of it," one of them said, "I don't believe I ever heard of any other name for him. Everybody calls him Sleep-Out."

Among my acquaintances is a middle-aged party with a round, ruddy countenance and eyes that peer through thick spectacle panes, known as Doc Hall. It is my understanding that Doc is a banker. He frequents the pleasure resorts around and about the country, traveling with the seasons, and engages in the banking business as he goes. The name of his bank is the Faro Bank.

I was asking Dr. Hall how he came to be known as Doc Hall and he a banker.

"They called me Doc when I was a boy down in Gallatin, Tenn.," said he, "because when the boys used to get their ears frost-bitten in winter I used to breathe on them and thaw them out. They would pay me a nickel or buy me a licorice whip or something of the kind. And they called me Doc."

"Gloster Red" Stuck To Him.

Old Urban McInerny died in Pittsburgh a few weeks back. Far and wide and for many a year he was known to the racing profession as Gloster Red and also as Col. Hemingway McInerny. Kid Wilson was known as "The Kid" until the day of his death at the age of 74, and Kid Hicks, of Detroit is still Kid Hicks to those who know him or of him at the age of 60.

There are hundreds of these distinctive names in the sport business, but Mr. McGraw is the only one who has objected. Like his name of Muggsy, most of them were fixed to the subjects in their youth, but others were invented after the boys matured. All refer to some peculiarity, some

ROBINS LOSE, 4-1, AGAINST ZACHARY

Former Nat Scatters 8 Hits; Berger, Frederick Get Homers.

BROOKLYN, July 8 (A.P.).—Old Tom Zachary halted the league-leading Brooklyn Robins today, giving them only nine hits, well scattered, while the Boston Braves gained a 4-to-1 victory.

A home run by Johnny Frederick was the only Brooklyn score, and the few other times that the Robins threatened, Boston's fine infield play stopped them. The Braves made four double plays and the Robins three.

The Robins used four pitchers, but all of Boston's runs came off Watson Clark, the starter, Maranville's single in the first was followed by Wally Berger's twenty-fourth home run, while two hits, an infield out and Zachary's sacrifice brought two more tallies in the fourth.

Collins pitched shutout ball until the ninth inning, when he eased up and allowed four hits and the lone Giant run. The Phillies opened fire on Bill Walker in the third inning and continued against Heving and Pruett for a total of fourteen hits. Frank O'Doul hit a home run in the fifth inning.

It was the seventh victory of the season for Mel Harder, youthful Cleveland pitcher. The Browns sent in three men against him. Coffman lasted a little less than an inning. Holshauser stuck for two rounds and Stiles finished.

U. S. COLLEGIANS IN ENGLAND.

Liverpool, July 8 (A.P.).—The 31 Princeton and Cornell athletes en route to meet the Oxford and Cambridge boys at Stamford Bridge Saturday arrived here today on the steamship Baltic. They landed in a typical Scotch mist and lost no time boarding the boat train for London.

WALES BIDS GODSPEED TO LIPTON

Personally Conveys Message to U. S. Challenger.

LONDON, July 8 (A.P.).—Britain today officially said farewell to Sir Thomas Lipton, the noted Irish yachtsman, on the eve of his attempt to bring back the America's Cup. The Prince of Wales personally conveyed a message of Godspeed to Sir Thomas at a complimentary luncheon at Fishmongers Hall which overlooks the 1,000-years-old Billingsgate fish market at London Bridge.

Sir Thomas is going to sail shortly with his Shamrock V for New York and Newport.

The Prince of Wales said: "All we ask, gentlemen, is a turn of the luck. I believe it will be as popular in America as here if Sir Thomas, at 80 years of age, brings back the America's Cup."

Sir Thomas, wearing his famous blue bow tie with white polka dots, rose to respond. He started out bravely to deliver his prepared speech from memory, but soon faltered, adjusted his spectacles, and read the rest of it.

Speech Tribute to Americans.

His speech was a tribute to the Americans for their fair play and square dealing in many past races. Turning to the prospects of his Shamrock V, he evinced an enthusiasm which seemed to say, "I am not too old as yet. I am going to show them this time."

Sir Thomas' voice trembled somewhat as, with delicious Irish brogue, he declared that the Shamrock would "put up a good fight. Shamrock V is a very fast boat, and she has a reasonable chance of success."

Sir Thomas referred to the American cup as "that elusive mug."

"Americans always won fairly and squarely," Lipton said. "If ever they made a mistake, I assure you it was in my favor."

United States Ambassador Charles G. Dawes, who sat on the other side of the Prince of Wales, joined heartily in the general laughter when the Irish sportsman told anecdotes of his early American quests.

Drink Toast In Water.

The American Ambassador and the Irish sportsman both drank a toast in water.

By GEORGE W. DALEY.

NEW YORK, July 8 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The big Yank losing streak is broken; gone, but not forgotten. After being shut out for the second time in a week by Rube Walberg today in their first game with the champion A's, they broke loose with an old-time display of long hitting in the second game and came out winners. They lost the first game, 4 to 0, but clubbed out a victory behind steady pitching by George Pipgras in the second, 9 to 4.

And they had good pitching all day except for a shaky start by Henry Johnson in the first game, when two passes, an error and a game-wrecking home run by Bing Miller won a battle for the champions before the first half-inning was over.

"Red" Ruffing took Johnson's place and went along even with Walberg in the best-pitched battle of the year, while 50,000 fans cheered every throw, but Ruffing could not win, for the Yanks could not make any runs for him. The A's made four hits in that game, the Yankees only three.

Macks Employ 4 Pitchers.

The Athletics have their pitching troubles, too. They have not enough Walbergs and Earnshaws and Groves. Ed Rommel, C. Perkins, a newcomer, and Bill Shores, all came and went in the second game and were hammered for thirteen hits, including homers by "Dusty" Cooke and Ben Chapman. The game closed with old Jack Quinn on the hill for the House of Mack, and even Quinn yielded a run.

It was the first time the Yanks had hit in double figures or made more than four runs since Wednesday of last week.

Pipgras, in the second game, was the victim of some more of the sloppy support which characterized the Yanks' seven-game slump, but he stuck to his guns through it all.

Rice and Cooke gave Foxx an easy double in the fourth when they let his fly ball fall between them, but even at that there would have been no more runs but for an error by Lary.

Chapman Throws Poorly.

In the sixth Chapman threw poorly on Simmons' crash, which went as a hit; Cooke dropped Foxx's fly and Lazzeri fumbled Miller's easy roller. Williams followed with a hit, but in spite of the breaks the A's got only two runs, for Pipgras struck out C. Perkins and Dykes and got Haas on an infield roller.

Babe Ruth, although not in the game, was chased from the Yankee bench during the first game by Umpire Brick Owens, who did not like some of the remarks flung at him by the home-run king after calling Pitcher Charley Ruffing, of the Yanks, out on strikes.

Besides being banished from the contest, Ruth was prohibited from returning to the New York dugout during the second game, being forced to watch the nightcap from a box seat in the stands with Mrs. Ruth.

IN THE WAKE OF THE GAME

Special to The Washington Post.

BOSTON, Mass., July 8.—Hal Rhyne made an exceptionally fine stop of Rice's hard grounder in the Nats' first, but then pegged poorly to first. This resulted in a run, for Manush's single and an air sacrifice followed. This latter blow, off Joe Cronin's bat, sent Center Fielder Tommy Oliver all the way back to the fence in deepest center.

In the second, Rhyne shot a mile-a-minute liner for which Cronin did not have to budge an inch to take.

When Umpire Campbell called a high strike on Lisenbee, ending the second, the fans started "riding" him and kept it up for the balance of the game. Campbell, whose ruling on the "momentary" catch in Washington two weeks ago caused a near-riot, also aroused fans here last Sunday, and this was the first kick which the Boston rooters had had over any of his decisions since.

Rhyne circled around under Manush's high foul in the third and finally grabbed it, making quite a catch, as a high wind was playing weird pranks with all loopers.

Roy Webb, former Nat, went across the right-field foul line in the fourth and to make a nobby catch of Spencer's effort.

Scarritt's triple, which opened the alien productive third round, was a liner all the way to the stands in deepest center. It was a prodigious clout which whizzed past West at a mile-a-minute clip.

"Old Sol" seems to be working hand and hand with Sam Rice this season. In Washington, Sam was given a double when Harry Rice lost one in when he had plenty. Scarritt opened for the Sox with a lusty triple and Webb singled him home. Regan's double scored Webb and then Miller singled the second-sacker home. At this stage, Marberry managed to settle down and stop the advance with the score tied.

It did not remain tied long, however, for in the home half of round five, Todt dropped a homer into the right field stands with the sacks empty, putting the Beaneaters on top, a pleasure which they enjoyed until the Nats' "lucky" frame.

With one gone, Myer coaxed a walk and Rice evened the count again with a double down the left field line. Here Manush broke into the limelight through the medium of a four-base clout—and a real one, too—high into the stands in right field. Cronin followed with a single, but this blow was wasted.

This was the last bit of excitement until the eighth when, with one dead and none on, Webb hit one of the hardest drives seen here this season, lining a homer well into the stands in deepest center. This cut the Nats' lead to a single run, but Marberry saw to it that this margin was enough by setting the natives down in order in their final turn at bat, thanks to two good stops and throws by Cronin.

VANDERPOOL GALLOPS TO 8TH STRAIGHT VICTORY

Miami Pride Winner at Empire

Two-Year-Old Brings Total Earnings to $29,760.

YONKERS, N. Y., July 8 (N.Y.W. N.S.).—Vander Pool, the pride of Miami, came back to the races at Empire City today and made it eight straight. The son of Campfire —Bramble Rose just galloped along in front to win the third purse of $700 from H. P. Whitney's Smear in a gallop at the short price of 1 to 5.

McAuliffe had Vander Pool in hand all the way except for a sixteenth of a mile rounding the turn when he let him run. The performance was decidedly impressive as a public trial for the Whirl Stakes on Saturday when he will be put to a stiffer test.

Mrs. M. P. Allen's good 2-year-old started for the first time at Miami on January 20. He won two other races in Florida including the Miami Juvenile Stakes and then came North to score in two at Bowie, including the Kindergarten Stakes, one at Havre de Grace in the Aberdeen Stakes and one at Jamica in the Youthful Stakes. His easy victory today brought his total earnings to $29,760.

Vander Pool is a colt of fine length and good points except for a rather weak neck and a slightly deformed hind leg injured as a yearling. So far the leg has not hampered his racing and there is no question about his being a horse of much quality.

—Arlington Park Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

SEVEN races are on the program at Arlington Park, this track seeming to alternate, with eight races every other day. The attendance at this meeting has shown surprising increase from day to day, and with the Classic, with Gallant Fox in it, which will boost the winnings of the Woodward champion $70,000 or more, the largest crowd is expected Saturday that ever saw a racing event in Chicago.

The feature today is the Fox Lake Handicap, $2,000 added, a mile. BROWN WISDOM is selected to win over a very strong field. W. R. Coe's 3-year-old CARUSO is in light, and he is all horse. He may press the favorite to the last notch and even beat him. The track is too fast for PETEE WRACK, topweight, and the best horse in race, if he is on the kind of track he is best suited. The chances are that PETEE WRACK is getting in trim for the Arlington Cup and the Saratoga Cup races, at longer distances than a mile. WILLIAM T. should not be overlooked all together, but it seems he is in deep water.

FIRST RACE—For 2-year-olds may go to AUSTERLITZ. BROWN EYED MARY may be the favorite and will be a keen contender. The Greentree Stable's CHUCKLING is pretty sure of a part of the purse.

SECOND RACE—Is a claiming affair for 3-year-olds and upward at six furlongs. FRENCH LASS is the class and should repeat. She beat a stronger field than this last week. HOT SHOT will doubtless be the contender. CROFTON, not at his best, should beat CHEERS for show money.

GOOD AND GAY PURSE for fillies, the secondary feature, should be won by SUPREME SWEET, in spite of the presence in the race of the fast fillies, PANSY WALKER and CONCLAVE. CONCLAVE has plenty of the speed, but is a bad actor. SUPREME SWEET is the most consistent in the field.

FIFTH RACE—HOT TODDY seems to have this sewed up. This is one of the fastest horses in the country when at his best, and last out won a stake over better opposition than he will find here. GALAHAD will be the contender, but is no match for Mrs. Hitt's horse. CANAAN should hold the others safe. HOT TODDY is in with only 107 pounds—it looks like a gift.

SIXTH RACE — VOLTMETER probably will win, but if BATTLING ON is up to a race he will have to do his best to get home first. SUPRYSE showed a speedy race last out and was second in a large field.

SEVENTH RACE — AVIATOR is probably best of the claimers at a mile and a furlong. QUIBBLER is in the same class and it is a toss up between the two, with MAT MAHONEY having a good chance for third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NEVER FADE, $18.20, $8.28, $4.98; PORT CODINE, $3.24, $2.76; BOILING, $5.08.

NEVER FADE began slowly, but quickly closed a big gap, raced into keen contention entering the stretch, wore down PORT CODINE reaching last furlong, took lead and drew out at end. PORT CODINE forced and set the early pace first half mile, taking lead at stretch turn, but tired when winner challenged in stretch. BOILING, racing on the outside, was outrun to the stretch turn, then closed a gap in final quarter and closed going fast. NORODOM displayed good early speed, raced well to the stretch, but tired in final drive. FOREIGN EXCHANGE had no excuse.

SECOND RACE—About two miles (short course). Purse, $2,000; claiming. The Bridle Spur Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 2:46. Off at 2:46. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IRISH JIG, $8.70, $4.12, $4.04; BROWN STOUT, $2.88, $3.18; ASTRONOMY, $3.18.

IRISH JIG, jumping well, always in pursuit of BROWN STOUT after being restrained to the final turn, came fast with a strong challenge and when leader bobbled, quickly headed latter for lead and drew away. BROWN STOUT displayed good early speed, began to tire at the final turn of the field and, making a bad bobble in landing at the thirteenth obstacle, almost falling, lost the lead and the race. ASTRONOMY, racing restrained in early stages, gained steadily all the last half mile. He jumped well and kept WOODY safe.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAKE HASTE, $30.92, $11.20, $5.14; NIFTY, $3.34, $2.74; JEANNE WACHS, $3.64.

MAKE HASTE, away fast, raced right in the wake of leader while saving ground on inside, and then coming fast on the outside around the stretch turn, gradually wore down NIFTY in a long, hard final drive and drew clear at the finish. NIFTY had high early speed, set a fast pace to the last furlong, where she tired gradually when the winner challenged and could not stall off MAKE HASTE, but held on well. JEANNE WACHS had speed from start, always held on well on the inside and kept her position save. LOVE BALL closed some ground. RED CROSS SISTER tired.

INSCO, going in best form, displayed good speed, forced the pace of CHARMER to stretch the pace leader down in stretch and, holding on, just outlasted JACK HASKELL. JACK HASKELL saved ground while racing on inside and, keeping close up, came fast in the stretch and just missed wearing down the winner in final strides. WIZARDRY outrun to the stretch turn, closed fast in the final quarter, but hung slightly in final drive. DOUGHERTY displayed good speed until around the stretch turn before tiring. BOROUGH MONGER had no mishaps.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 5:46. Off at 5:46. Winner, L. M. Severson's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OTILLA, $5.70, $4.04, $2.80; MACHETE, $6.34, $3.98; PRINCESS EDITH, $2.80.

OTILLA, racing hard held, challenged and took lead from PRINCESS EDITH nearing the stretch turn and, after settling to the front, held MACHETE safe in hard, final drive to win going away. MACHETE also made his run entering the stretch, disposed of PRINCESS EDITH and challenged OTILLA strongly, threatened to take the lead, but weakened in final furlong. PRINCESS EDITH had the best early speed, but soon tired and was done at the stretch turn. OUR PAL could never reach contention.

CONSIDINE AND MANGAN GAIN DOUBLES SEMIFINALS

Title Holders Extended in Tourney

Elliott, Markey Bow, 10-8, 6-1; Army and Navy Pairs Win.

Stars to Clash Today in Semifinals of District Play.

By JACK ESPEY.

BOB CONSIDINE and Tom Mangan assured themselves places in the semifinals of both divisions of the District championship tennis tournament yesterday when they paired to defeat Bob Elliott and Bud Markey, 10—8, 6—1, in the doubles, on the Edgemoor Club courts.

Today this winning combination will split, with Considine battling Mangan in the singles, semifinals. In the other singles match, Dooly Mitchell will oppose Billy Jacobs, of Baltimore. The latter two will open their struggle at 3:30 p. m., to be followed by Considine and Mangan at 4:15.

The three other victorious teams in yesterday's quarter-final round of doubles were Majs. Robert C. Van Vliet, jr., and Thomas D. Finley, the Army doubles champions; Ensigns Bill Howard and Jimmy Farrin and Commander C. C. Gill and Lieut. C. S. Smith. The doubles semifinals will be held tomorrow with the Considine-Mangan and Van Vliet-Finley duos in one encounter and Howard-Farrin and Gill-Smith in the other, which will be an all-Navy affair.

Elliott and Markey gave Considine and Mangan, the defending champions, a terrific fight in the first set, but they found the title holders hitting on all six in the following set and quickly faded from the picture.

Throughout the first set Markey's clever exhibition at the net continuously kept the champions in hot water. Markey, former Notre Dame tennis star, was runner-up in the Western intercollegiate championships last year.

Games went with service in the first set until the fifth, when the champions broke through to lead, 3—2. Markey and Elliott retaliated in the sixth and made good on service in the seventh, pulling up from 0—40 to take the lead themselves.

In the thirteenth, Considine and Mangan blasted Markey's delivery and the advantage returned to the champions. However, once again the challengers rallied to tie and then go ahead, making it 8—7 in their favor.

Both Markey and Elliott grew unsteady at this point, and in a few minutes Considine and Mangan ran through three games to capture the set, breaking Markey's service in the seventeenth at love.

The second set consumed less than one-third the time required by the first, with the champions piling up a 4—0 lead. Markey's service stopped them momentarily in the fifth game, but they soon regained their stride to win the next two games and the match.

A mild upset occurred when Ensigns Howard and Farrin eliminated Dooly Mitchell and Billy Jacobs, 6—4, 7—5. The winners had been seeded third, while the losers occupied the No. 2 position.

After gaining a lead of 4—1 in the first set, Mitchell and Jacobs fell victims to Howard's blinding service and Farrin's trick drop shots. The turning point came when Howard served to consecutive aces in the sixth game. The ultimate winners then clicked off four more games in a row.

Majs. Van Vliet and Finley had too much steadiness for Pat Deck and Bill Seidell, whom they subdued by scores of 6—3, 6—3, while Commander Gill and Lieut. Smith held a similar edge over Lieut. C. S. Seely and Ensign Merwin Halstead. Scores of this match were 6—2, 6—4.

PLAY NIGHT FOOTBALL.

Miami, Fla., July 8 (A.P.).—As far as football is concerned, the University of Miami bids fair to become a night school this fall. President B. F. Astie said today that negotiations are under way to have all of the school's scheduled football games played at night under floodlights.

Portuguese Giant Is Rival of Carnera

New York, July 8 (A.P.).—A rival of Primo Carnera, in size at least, has arrived in the United States for a whirl at the boxing business as it is conducted here.

Jose Santa, of Portugal, arrived on the Olympic yesterday. He is 6 feet 8½ inches tall, he confessed, weighs 255 pounds, has a reach of 80½ inches and wears size 13 shoes. Sartorially, Santa is not particularly modest. He affects bright-colored suits and wears a large purple felt hat.

Granville Gude Marries; Noted as Star Oarsman

Won Fame for Tech High and Potomac Boat Club.

GRANVILLE GUDE.

GRANVILLE GUDE, noted amateur oarsman and former Tech High School athletic star, and Miss Bessie E. Duvall, employed as a bookkeeper at Gude Brothers, florists, yesterday were married at Anacostia Methodist Church and departed immediately on a honeymoon trip to Bermuda.

Gude is associated with the firm of Gude Brothers. His bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Duvall, of 1805 Good Hope road southeast.

Although prominent in his high school days as a four-letter man in football, baseball and basket ball and on his school crew, Gude achieved his greatest fame as a singles sculler for the Potomac Boat Club following his graduation from Tech High in 1921.

Rowed for National Championship.

For three years he was a contender for the United States sculling championship, and in races in Baltimore and Philadelphia rowed against the winners of the famed diamond scull race. In 1923, 1924 and 1925 he was the outstanding singles sculler in the South Atlantic section and considered the best oarsman in Potomac River history.

Gude was captain of the last crew sponsored by Tech High, the eight which won the scholastic title in the District in 1921, a few years before the sport was abandoned in the schools here. On one occasion in a Middle States regatta in Baltimore young Gude, then a novice, won the singles scull championships in the junior, intermediate and senior races on the same afternoon.

Miss Madison Spurns $10,000 Pro Contract

Los Angeles, July 8 (A.P.).—Miss Helene Madison, 17-year-old Seattle schoolgirl, who bettered four world records in the National A. A. U. swimming meet at Long Beach, has received an offer to turn professional, it became known today.

The offer, from a New York sportsman, was $10,000 for a series of exhibitions with Miss Martha Norelius.

Mackenzie, Willing, Ouimet Out of Open

Minneapolis, Minn., July 8 (A.P.).—Three ranking amateurs, all members of this year's Walker Cup Team, today formally withdrew from the entry roll for the national open, starting at Interlachen Thursday.

They are Dr. O. F. Willing, of Portland, Oreg.; Francis Ouimet, Boston, and Roland Mackenzie, Washington.

Pressure of other activities was given as the reason for the withdrawal of the trio. This will leave 147 competitors in the tournament. Nearly all of these played a practice round on the championship course today despite the intense heat.

Said to Have Invented "Hard-Boiled Egg."

Some years ago, when George Washington Grant owned the Boston Braves, Mr. McGraw invited him to step down to a beer saloon for a crock of Pilsner and a snack of pigs' knuckles. Grant said no, that he was just going to pop into a dairy lunch and have one 10-cent hard-boiled egg for himself. There was a light of apprehension in his eye as he said this, and as Mr. McGraw growled over his $2.50 worth of knuckles and kraut he came to certain conclusions about Mr. Grant. I am told that this was how the term "hard-boiled egg" originated, meaning a person of thrifty character, and that Mr. Grant was the charter egg in the mother nest by Mr. McGraw's nomination.

There have been ever so many honest Johns about the country, but the one best known here was the late Honest John Kelly, who ran a gambling house in the days before the Rosenthal assassination.

Authorities on the lore of the town differ as to the reason why people called him Honest John.

One patriarch says it was because Mr. Kelly saw a patron, somewhat the worse for his wine, wobbling about his halls with his watch hanging out and didn't take it. But another old codger broke in there to correct him. Said he: "No, he took the watch, but saw it was no good and gave it back, and that was how they come to call him Honest John."

Kennedyville Defeats Galena by 15-4 Count

Special to The Washington Post.

Galena, Md., July 8.—After attaining the highest average in the Chesapeake Bay League at the close of the first half of the season, local flingers were swamped under a barrage of hits from the heavy-swatting Kennedyville Club and went down under a 15-to-4 defeat. After a series of outfield hits by Tobin, Crew, Smith, Loller, Archibald and Williams had driven six runs across the plate in the fourth inning and after Bill Johnson had relieved Hadley on the mound for the home team, the relief pitcher was touched for four tallies in the sixth and three more in the ninth, with Williams and Loller continuing their stick work.

Mary Miller Is Victor In Winchester Tourney

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., July 8.—Miss Mary Miller carried off the Governors' Cup in the handicap play for women at the Winchester Golf Club yesterday afternoon, defeating Miss Frances Page, who was only one stroke behind Miss Miller. Miss Page made the pace and seemed to have the cup won, but 10 minutes later Miss Miller breezed in with a happy smile and a 77 to break up a premature celebration. These two brought in the only cards under par from the fifteen contestants. A final round with a net two under par was all it took for the cup winner, and that is what she went out and brought back. That Miss Page was three strokes under par on her final round indicated how tough the going had become. Mrs. Stewart O. Elting, the club champion and record holder on the present length course, came in third with a final round net two under par figures. Her full play card was one over par. The scores of the first three were, Miss Miller, first, 53; second 52; gross, 105; handicap, 28; net, 77. Miss Page, first 56; second, 53; gross, 109; handicap, 31; net, 78. Mrs. Elting, first, 50; second, 45; gross, 95; handicap, 14; net, 81.

Wiles Pitches One-Hit Game for Georgetown

When Hurley, of the Samosets, sent the ball skimming over second base in the ninth inning of a French's League game yesterday, he spoiled a no-hit pitching performance for "Bubba" Wiles, Georgetown Midgets' star. However, that hit failed to take credit from the little hurler. Wiles won his game, 6-1; fanned nine batters and got two hits himself. The first Samoset player to reach first base was on an error in the fifth inning.

NAT HURLERS LEARN TO GO ROUTE

Johnson Sees Trade of Braxton as Boon to Mound Staff.

sary for them to finish them with Braxton always available.

"Now," Johnson concluded, "they know that we have no regular relief man and that it is up to them to go out there and finish their own games. Maybe this is just a pipe dream on my part, but I believe that it has had something to do with the way the pitchers have been performing of late."

Record of Pitchers Impressive.

The Nats' mound staff has, by the way, an exceptional record since the team returned home early this month. In the 24 games which the Nats played during their home stay, winning sixteen, the Washington starting pitcher went the route fifteen times, while on another occasion Hadley granted but three hits in ten innings, being withdrawn to let Shires fan for him, showing that only three were actually knocked out. In these days of the lively ball and every batter a potential home run hitter, this is a record of which the Nats well may be proud.

While Outfielder Dave Harris gives the impression of being unusually slow afield, according to Art Shires, who should know whereof he speaks in this connection in view of the fact that both were teammates on the White Sox, the Greensboro sheriff is really quite a ground coverer.

"Dave just looks slow," said the Great One. "He really gets around about as fast as the average and any time he gets his mitts on the ball he's a sure catch."

Harris went over to Providence this morning, where he was presented with a diamond ring for having cracked out the most homers of any member of the Eastern League team of that city during the 1929 season. He hit 27.

IN THE WAKE OF THE GAME

the sun, while in the fifth today the veteran was given credit for a triple on a short hoist which Webb was waiting to catch, when he suddenly ducked as the sun got in his eyes.

Cronin chased out to short left-center for Webb's loper ending the fifth.

The sun, which gave Rice a triple in the fifth, got in his eyes in the home sixth and almost caused him to let Miller's fly get away. He finally grabbed the ball just as it was about to drop safely.

Cedric Durst, former Yankee, pinch-hit for Pitcher Lisenbee in the home seventh and but for Myer would have gotten a Texas League single. The Nat second-sacker went deep in right to make an exceptionally difficult catch of the fly.

Regan forgot that he had to touch the runner, with Bluege on second in the eighth, when Miller threw there trying to get the runner hustling back following Marberry's tap. The error was charged to Miller, however, for his peg was not a perfect one, the official scorer taking the view that the play should have been made at first base in the first place.

Skipper Wagner used another pinch-hitter in the eighth, Sweeney taking Rhyne's place at the swinging block. He was no better than the man he succeeded, however, popping to Cronin. This change enabled Bob Reeves, former Nat, to see action.

Oliver, Sox center fielder, who has looked good as a fly chaser since the Nats arrived here, went close to the stands in deep center to make a fine over-the-shoulder catch of Cronin's long fly in the ninth.

Lyons' Performance Defeats Tigers, 3 to 2

Chicago, July 8 (A.P.).—Ted Lyon's pitching and batting lifted the White Sox to a 3-to-2 victory over Detroit in the fourth game of the series today.

Lyons gave the Tigers ten hits, but kept them well spaced and his triple with Kamm and Ttate on in the second inning accounted for two Sox runs. Smead Jolley poked out his twelfth homer of the season to provide the winning run.

Helen Wills Embarks For U. S. With Medals

London, July 8 (A.P.).—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody today ended a successful tennis tour of Europe when she sailed for home with the women's Wimbledon singles championship and a share in the women's doubles crown.

Mrs. Moody was presented with two gold medals at the station by the vice president of the British Lawn Tennis Association.

"English tennis is improving," Mrs. Moody asserted. "You did not win any titles at Wimbledon, but that was just bad luck," she told a London newspaper interviewer.

Mrs. Moody continued:

"I always enjoy Wimbledon more than any other tournament, and my final match against Elizabeth Ryan was splendid."

Mrs. Moody said her lawn tennis plans for the next year were not settled. "I never plan that far ahead," she declared. "I want to come over again next year and probably shall."

Southern Prince Georges Nines Planning for Series

Capital City League Affiliation Sought by Capitol Heights, Junior Order, Shady Oak and Marlboro Baseball Teams.

CAPITAL CITY LEAGUE unlimited teams may get competition from a new source. Four teams from the southern part of Prince Georges County are organizing a section and will petition the Capital City League in hopes of participating in the play-off for the championship of the District, nearby Maryland and nearby Virginia.

The group of teams includes Capitol Heights Junior Order, Shady Oak, Marlboro and Capitol Heights.

George Miles, of the Capital Heights A. C., is the leader in the organization and the clubs will meet at his home in Capitol Heights Friday night at 8 o'clock.

It was indicated last night that the Southern Prince Georges section would be admitted to the Capital City League, which already has the following sections in the unlimited class: District, Northern Virginia, Prince Georges County, Montgomery County.

Double-headers in the new section would be necessary in order that the group may declare a champion to compete in the intersection play-off next month which promises to excel any Capital City League championship series since the organization of the league.

Goodman, 1929 Conqueror Of Jones, Brings Own Hotel

MINNEAPOLIS, July 8 (A.P.).—Johnny Goodman, Omaha's midget master of the links, had to hitch-hike to Pebble Beach last fall where he eliminated Bobby Jones from the national amateur in an early round and won wide notice.

But not this year. Now he travels pretentiously and brings his hotel right along. In a house on wheels, Goodman, with two Nebraska friends, has set up housekeeping just off Interlachen, where Thursday he will make his bid for the national open crown.

In the outing car is a gas stove, a radio, writing desk, with plenty of space for swinging an iron. Goodman lacked one thing, running water, and with characteristic ingenuity, he set about to remedy that. He located a water pipe, obtained a long hose, and ran its nozzle right up to his kitchen's sink.

St. Louis, Mo., July 8 (A.P.).—The Pittsburgh Pirates clubbed two St. Louis pitchers for thirteen hits and defeated the Cardinals, 10 to 5, here today, keeping the Cardinals from going into a virtual tie for third place with the New York Giants. Kremer scattered the Cards' ten blows, one of which was a home run by Watkins. Grantham hit for the circuit for the Pirates. Flint Rhem's two wild pitches in the fourth inning finished his work for the day and charged him with the defeat.

TRADERS WIPE OUT MORNING DECLINE

Several Strong Stocks End Day With Small Gains After Bear Drive.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY UP

New York, July 8 (A.P.).—The financial markets were in two frames of mind today. Generally speaking, prices of stocks and commodities declined in the morning and rallied in the afternoon as professionals switched from the selling to the buying side. Net gains in equity shares were small, but some of the early losses had been sizable, so that the market gave a reasonably good demonstration of its resistance. Trading was again extremely dull.

July wheat broke to 86 cents a bushel, the lowest in seventeen years, during the early trading in Chicago, reflecting the weakness of Liverpool, as well as heavy shipments of winter wheat from the Southwest. However, the recovery from the bottom was sharp and the closing price of 89¼ represented a net improvement of 1¾. The other months were up about a cent. Corn, oats and other provisions were likewise weak in the forenoon, but likewise came back. The softness of cotton was attributed to the bearish Government crop report, which estimated July 1 acreage at 97.3 per cent of the 1929 figure, a disappointing reduction, in view of efforts to effect a 10 per cent cut. Cotton futures closed unchanged to 70 cents a bale lower, having sold off from $1 to $1.50 earlier.

The weekly figures on steel operations meant little because of the holiday interruption. With many plants closed over the week-end, the ratio for the industry droped to 48 per cent of rated capacity, against 64 in the previous week. United States Steel slumped to 55 per cent, compared with 69. It was said in trade circles, however, that there had been a moderate pick-up in activity as plants which had been closed resumed operations.

Rail Class Rates Increased.

There was some cheer for the railroads in the Interstate Commerce Commission's decision granting increased class rates to Eastern carriers and Western trunk lines. The rate case had been pending for several weeks, and the ruling, it is estimated, will bring $50,000,000 additional revenue annually to Eastern roads and $12,000,000 to the Westerns.

Money was comfortable. Call loans renewed at 2½ per cent, but funds were in more plentiful supply and the rate held all day. There was another downward revision in commercial paper, which was not a particularly encouraging indication of the demand for this form of credit.

Early selling of stocks was concentrated on U. S. Steel, American Telephone, American Can, Westinghouse, North American and other prominent shares whose moves the market is apt to follow. There were sharp breaks in Ingersoll Rand, Peoples Gas, Allied Chemical, Air Reduction, Liggett & Myers, American Machine & Foundry, Atchison and Johns-Manville, the last named touching 72, the lowest price in three years.

U. S. Steel Gains 2 Points Net.

When U. S. Steel halted at 153¼, less than 2 points above the year's low, the bear faction grew discouraged and a covering movement appeared early in the afternoon, continuing to the close, although some of the weaker issues failed to make much recovery. U. S. Steel was the leader of the rally, finishing 2 points net higher. American Can, Borden, General Electric, General Motors, Chrysler, Nash, Gillette, Studebaker, Auburn Auto, Southern Railway, Atchison, New York Central, General Electric, Union Pacific and Westinghouse Electric were up a point or two on the day.

The erratic Spanish peseta, with another wide break, was one of the few foreign currencies to show much of a decline. Sterling cables rose slightly.

Chain store reports for June showed a mixture of gains and losses. F. W. Woolworth's gross business was off 12.2 per cent from June, 1929, but S. H. Kress and J. J. Newberry made small gains.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, July 8 (A.P.).—Black rust menacing United States wheat and curtailing wheat yields in France did a good deal to bring about higher prices here today for wheat. The rise in wheat values, however, was preceded by a new smashing of low-price records cutting down materially the 10-cents-a-bushel difference that until today has separated recent bottom levels from the lowest reached 17 years ago. Breaks in stock exchange quotations were largely blamed for today's fresh downward swing of wheat prices, but enlarged export buying of wheat was afterward a factor in turning the wheat market upward.

Closing quotations on wheat were firm at nearly the top point reached, ⅝ to 1¾ cents a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed at ¾ to 1⅛ cents advance, oats ⅛ to ¼ of a cent up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 5 cents.

Adding to anxiety about black rust both in domestic wheat and foreign were advices that five days of high temperatures and insufficient moisture had wilted crops over many sections from Nebraska north to the Canadian line. There were also reports of damage by a storm in Canada that extended a distance of 500 miles. A special further stimulus to buyers of wheat was found in assertions that export business of much larger volume than acknowledged has been in progress with estimates current that European purchases today and yesterday aggregated upward of 2,000,000 bushels.

Muggy weather prevailing today, ideal for the spread of black rust, served to focus attention sharply on dispatches from Chicago crop experts telling of the plague attacking the sheath of wheat plants at many places in South Dakota and Montana, with the rust also above the sheath in numerous cases. Meanwhile, cables from France told of persistent complaints of crop deterioration caused by rust and other factors, with signs indicating that France is bidding for North American wheat and that the French import duty on wheat may be removed. About half of the 2,000,000 bushels of wheat reported bought for Europe in the last 48 hours was said to be wheat grown in the United States. There was talk heard also that the peak of the harvest movement of wheat has already been passed in the country south and west of Hutchinson, Kans.

Corn advanced more readily than wheat, with corn traders putting stress on reports that the next few weeks will either make or break the new corn crop. Besides, primary receipts of corn today were much smaller than a year ago, and considerable notice was taken that the Argentine government had diminished its estimate of the Argentine 1930 exportable corn surplus by 5,688,000 bushels. Oats steadied with corn after having joined corn and wheat in reaching new low-price records.

Provisions were firm as a result of buying credited to Eastern account.

HIGH GRADE BONDS RISE IN QUIET DAY

Several Rail and U. S. Issues Advance to New 1930 Peak Prices.

FOREIGN GROUP MIXED

New York, July 8 (A.P.).—Money seeking investment flowed into the listed bond market at a moderate rate today to facilitate the advancement of high grade issues toward new high prices for the year.

While the sales volume dropped appreciably from Monday, the technical position of the market is so strong that the demand for high grade bonds was sufficient to carry a wide list of railroad issues into higher ground, some of them closing at new highs.

A few utilities followed the leadership of the railroad list, and dispite light trading, several United States Governments established the highest prices of the year. Some soft spots developed in the foreign list, but an unusually strong demand aided prices. Stock privilege issues rose and fell with the swing of stocks and the general level of the group at the close was only slightly lower.

Legal Rail Issues Quiet.

The market for legal issues was rather quiet and several bonds eased fractionally at the close, but higher prices were the rule among carrier issues and several new high's for the year were established. Except for the setback suffered at the time of the sharp stock market break last month, the best grade railroad bonds have steadily improved and consequently are the first to reach a point where the 1930 high prices may be advanced.

New highs were established by Baltimore & Ohio 6s, Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh 4½s, New Orleans Terminal 4s, New York Central 4s, Pennsylvania general 4½s, and several issues notably Atchison general 4s, Pennsylvania debenture 4½s, Canadian Pacific 4s and Canadian National Railway 5s, equaled the best figure of the year on the day's movement.

Buyers displayed interest in several utility issues. American Telephone debenture 5s sold at its high price of the year and the 5s of 1946 established a new top price. Consolidated Gas 5½s and Laclede Gas 5s were quietly traded but reached new highs for the year. Illinois Bell Telephone 5s advanced.

South Americans Dip.

Movement of foreign bonds was mixed with gains exceeding losses. A feature was the demand for Australia 4½s, which gained 1¾ points. South American issues moved narrowly and were slightly lower. Colombia Agricultural Bank 6s dropped 8 points.

Finland 7s established a new year's high with a point gain. German 5½s were active and fluctuated rather widely, losing more than a point and then rallied to close only ¼ of a point lower.

New offerings tomorrow will include $4,000,000 Wisconsin Power & Light 5 per cent gold bonds, and $6,000,000 Province of Ontario 4½ per cent gold bonds.

C.W. CLAYTON HEADS CREDIT ASSOCIATION

Waldo J. Tastet Is Elected Vice President; Directors Named at Meeting.

TRIBUTE IS PAID WATTS

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Charles W. Clayton, official of the F. P. May Hardware Co., was elected president of the Washington Association of Credit Men at its annual meeting held in the Raleigh Hotel yesterday. Waldo J. Testet, credit manager of Fries, Beall & Sharp Co., was selected vice president.

Directors selected for a period of two years include Lister T. Watts, Frank W. White, Hilleary G. Hoskinson, Kenneth S. Miller, J. Frank Kelly, Maurice Mazo and Jesse Chaney. R. B. Leedy was selected a director for one year.

Immediately after adjournment of the meeting, John A. Reilly was selected secretary of the new board of directors, and William Gordon Buchanan was reelected treasurer.

Lister T. Watts, of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, the retiring president, was paid a high tribute by the association for his work during the past three years. A beautiful golf set was presented to him. In his report to the annual meeting, Mr. Reilly stated that the association had shown a large increase in membership and trade group activity. He urged continuation of the fraud prevention work of the association and suggested increasing the courses in its educational department.

Outing in August.

The membership campaign of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association will soon be in progress. The aim of its membership committee is to obtain 200 members before the end of the calendar year. There are now approximately 145 members in the association in good standing. John Lynch is chairman of the membership committee.

Louis Rothschild, director of the Washingotn Better Business Bureau, will address the association at its monthly meeting tomorow afternoon at 12:30 o'clock, at the Hay-Adams House. The association became affiliated with the bureau recently.

The association's program for future activities is taking form. A summer outing for August is being arranged, announcement of plans for which probably will be made at the July meeting.

The business situation has as yet taken no definite turn for the better, states the bulletin of Hemphill, Noyes & Co., with local offices. It admits, however, that forces are at work that should shortly make betterment perceptible.

"We are not certain that the bottom of this downward movement has been witnessed," it continues, "but we do feel that improvement is not far ahead. Sentiment toward the market by bankers and busines men is improving and this type of investor buys in advance of the general public."

Jarrell at Convention.

President Thomas E. Jarrell, of the Thos. E. Jarrell Co. and the Washington Savings Bank, is attending the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at Toronto this week, after which he will visit other interesting places with Canadian realtors before returning to Washington.

Harold R. Smoot has joined the staff of the Washington office of Harriman & Co.

President Francis G. Addison, jr., Security Savings & Commercial Bank, has returned from a recent visit on Chesapeake Bay.

Vice President Edward J. McQuade, Liberty National Bank, was a recent visitor at Atlantic City.

Charles Carroll Morgan, a local comanager of G. M. P. Murphy & Co., is back from a visit in New York and Long Island.

Harry M. Wheeler, of W. B. Hibbs & Co., has been confined to his residence at Tracy place by illness.

Curb Review

New York, July 8 (A.P.).—Trading on the curb market established a new record in slow motion today, with a turnover of 381,900 shares, the smallest in about two years. Price movements were irregular and uncertain, closing quotations averaged slightly lower. The more active issues sagged substantially during the morning, recording several new low levels for the year or longer, but rallied in sympathy with the big board before the close. Net changes at the finish were mostly a point or less.

Electric Bond & Share was again the center of activity, selling off 2 points to 73 during the morning, then rallying to close at 75¼, up 1¼, net. Hydro Electric dropped 2¾ to within a point of its low, and Associated Gas A lost a point. American Superpower, Niagara Hudson and other active features mostly closed off fractionally. In the natural gas group, Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line was a soft spot, losing more than 2 points.

In the holding company group, Transamerica was again subjected to rather heavy selling, declining 1⅜ to 27¼, a new low, and closing at 28¼. Oils generally eased, with Indian Territory A sagging slightly to record a new minimum, and Cities Service touching 24¾, only a fraction from its 1930 low. It then rallied, however, and closed at 25⅞, up ⅛, net. Gulf lost 2 points. Mines were dull and easy, Roan Antelope duplicating the year's low at 19¾, then rallying a fraction.

Among the more important industrials, Deere dropped to 82½, a new low, then rebounded to 86½, where it was up 1½ net at the finish. Aluminum Co. declined 4 to 210, equalling its previous 1930 minimum. Several of the low-priced less active issues plumbed new low levels. A few of the aviation issues firmed. Western Air Express and Ex-Cello each gained more than a point.

ADVICE ON INVESTMENTS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

In making inquiries address Charles W. Storm, financial department of The Washington Post, and inclose a self-addressed stamped envelope for reply.

Standard Brands.

E. T. H.—Would thank you very much for any information you may be able to give regarding Standard Brands, and what your opinion is of the common stock?

Answer—Recently announced that sales of Standard Brands were running materially ahead of last year for consolidated companies and benefits were beginning to be realized from extensive national advertising campaigns instituted following consolidation of various units. Expense of this advertising was being charged off immediately. Stock appears fairly attractive from a speculative-investment viewpoint.

American T. & T. Rights

M. L.—Will you give me some information on American Telephone & Telegraph rights? At what price is the common stock being offered to those holding the rights?

Answer—April 16, 1930, company offered stockholders of record May 23, 1930, rights to subscribe to one additional share at par, $100, for each six shares held. Rights expire August 1, 1930.

American Woolen Pfd.

A. B.—I have American Woolen preferred at $90. Do you see any future for holding?

Answer—Company entered the year 1930 with a small volume of unfilled orders and was affected subsequently by the continued decline in textile prices and by the lower level of general business and purchasing power. Official statement late in March last indicated that business for first half of this year was not expected to be good.

Concentrating of production in the larger units and utilizing every economy of manufacture is a feature that is favorable to a recovery in earning power with a change for the better in the wool market and general trade conditions. Fact that deficits were reported for both 1929 and 1928 and that future of industry remains uncertain does not hold out much promise for these shares, on which accumulated dividends on April 15, last, amounted to $21 a share.

Bulova; Eisler.

H. J. T.—I have been advised to buy Bulova Watch and Eisler Electric and would like a report on those companies, as to their financial standing, products and whether you consider the buying of these stocks a reasonably safe investment?

Answer—Bulova Watch Co. is a maker of watches and clocks. Stock may be regarded as a good speculative investment. The current dividend on common is $3 annually. Company recently changed fiscal year to end March 31. Net income for fifteen months ended therewith equaled, after preferred dividends, $5.04 a common share. Profits for year ended December 31, 1928, equaled $3.94 a share on adjusted capitalization.

Eisler Electric Corp. is a manufacturer of equipment and parts used in production of radio and other tubes, lamps, &c. Company reported for year ended December 31, 1929, net income equal to $5.23 a share, compared with $1 a share in 1928. Dividends of $1.50 a share annually are being paid. Considering large excess of earnings over dividend requirements, stock looks fairly attractive. Financial standing of both companies good. Bulova Watch having net working capital of $5,142,094 and Eisler Electric of $879,914.

Cutler-Hammer.

P. O. G.—How is Cutler-Hammer regarded? What is the outlook?

Answer—The common shares are selling at about ten times the 1930 prospective earnings. With prospects for future growth in earnings, the stock may be regarded as offering considerable attraction for the long-term outlook. Net earnings last year were equal to $8.14 per share after allowing for the 20 per cent stock dividend paid January 15, 1930. This figure was nearly double the rate of earnings of the year previous on the same basis. There is no funded debt or preferred stock outstanding.

Common dividends are paid at an annual rate of $3.60. At its current level, the stock yields about 6 per cent. The company is in strong shape, with cash and marketable securities of $1,329,694, as against total current liabilities of $961,591. Inventories, however, showed an increase of 50 per cent.

Delaware & Hudson.

F. P. W.—Do you regard Delaware & Hudson attractive at current quotations?

Answer—Bankers regard the stock at present levels as among the most attractive of the investment rails. Delaware & Hudson may be classed among the rich corporations, cash resources and marketable securities equaling approximately $120 per share. At prevailing levels, Delaware & Hudson yields about 8 per cent on its $9 dividend. Net income last year increased to $15.14 per share from $12.38 in 1928, due partly to increased "other income" from the employment of the large cash resources. The stock is regarded as a conservative investment for long-term holding.

National Bellas Hess.

L. G.-K.—A friend of mine advises me to get out of National Bellas Hess, which pays nothing, and into Cities Service, where the yield is attractive. What do you think of the proposition?

Answer—As investors desire a return on their money, the plan appears to be a good one, regardless of whether you are an investor or speculator. Cities Service, from the standpoint of cash, &c., is in excellent condition, cash and marketable securities last December amounting to nearly $91,000,000. Current assets were more than double current liabilities, while net working capital at the end of 1929 was in excess of $105,000,000. At current levels the yield is slightly in excess of 7 per cent. Another development favorable to the stock is the record breaking volume of earnings, which have shown a progressive monthly increase this year.

Exchange Buffet Corp.

T. V. H.—Kindly publish some facts regarding the Exchange Buffet Corporation

Answer—Earnings for the twelve months ended April equaled $2.20 per share of no par stock, on which dividends of $1.50 annually have been distributed since 1925. The yield, at current prices, is close to 6 per cent. Earnings for the April quarter, however, were smaller than for the same time last year, while sales for May were smaller than for the same month a year ago.

The company is in fair shape, with an excess of current assets over current liabilities. Exchange Buffet operates a quick lunch restaurant chain. The stock is a speculative investment.

U. S. Tobacco Co.

W. R. T.—Please give me the latest sales and earnings of U. S. Tobacco Co.

Answer—Earnings and sales are understood to exceed 1929 by a small margin. Nineteen twenty-nine was the banner year for the company, the leading manufacturer of snuff, and which also turns out pipe tobacco and cigarettes. At current quotations the stock yields approximately 6½ per cent on the $4 dividend.

Last year U. S. Tobacco earned $5.21 a share on the common, as increased by a 20 per cent stock dividend in the fall. The cash position is good, surplus exceeding $5,000,000, despite the $3,815,400 capitalized last year for the stock dividend. U. S. Tobacco is a speculative investment having some merit.

Tomato and Peach Shipments Decline

Holidays Slightly Unsettle Markets for Fruits and Vegetables.

The first of July found the fruit and vegetable markets somewhat unsettled, the holidays interfering with trading to some extent, according to the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Country markets for peaches, watermelons and lettuce were stronger, but tomatoes declined in western Tennessee. Some decline in shipments was noted in potatoes, watermelons, peaches and tomatoes. The cucumber season was closing in North Carolina, but shipments were increasing in Maryland and Virginia.

Virginia still exceeded all other States as a source of potato supply in early July, but Kansas and Missouri were shipping actively. On the Eastern Shore of Virginia, cobblers dropped to a range of $2.50 to $2.60 per barrel.

Demand for best Georgia peaches was exceeding the supply available in early July. Output of melons during the first week of July was only about half as large as during the last week of June. City markets still reported an accumulation of supplies and prices were lower. Shipments of tomatoes decreased about one-third with daily average around 170 cars. Movement was becoming active from Maryland and Virginia and was increasing from Tennessee.

U. S. Disallows Claim For Hat Cleaning Item

A hat may be wearing apparel but it is not clothing. At least such is the ruling of Comptroller General McCarl in a case of a Government expense account.

The ruling was called for after C. M. Aldous, of the Bureau of Biological Survey, had charged $1.50 for the cleaning of a hat at Rosewell, N. Mex., to "cleaning and pressing of clothes." The claim was disallowed yesterday.

Bailey Considers Injunction Action

Indiana Door Firm Seeks to Have Union's Suit Dismissed.

Arguments on a motion to dismiss a suit for injunction brought against Local No. 5, International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Ironworkers of America by the Metal Door & Trim Co., of La Porte, Ind., were heard by Justice Jennings Bailey, of the District Supreme Court, yesterday. The injunction suit charged interference with activities of the Indiana company in connection with work on the Garfinckel Building at Fourteenth and F streetz northwest.

Through Attorneys James S. Easby-Smith and Francis W. Hill, jr., the defendant local asked that the suit be dismissed "in that the plaintiff company has failed to state a case entitling it to the injunctive action of the court." The bill, it is stated, is too vague, indefinite and uncertain to charge a conspiracy and the allegations of overt acts are not made on information and belief.

The Metal Door & Trim Co. claimed that a strike had been called because the company was using carpenters in the construction of elevator inclosures instead of ironworkers. After Attorney William C. Sullivan had defended the suit for injunction brought by the plaintiff, Justice Bailey took the matter under advisement.

NEWS OF LATEST HAPPENINGS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

TERM OF SIX YEARS GIVEN BANK CASHIER

TO WORK ON ROAD GANG

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Sentence of six years in prison was meted out to Clay T. Brittle, 32 years old, former cashier of the Bank of Del Ray, Va., upon pleading guilty yesterday in Corporation Court in Alexandria to an indictment charging him with larceny of $61,179 of the funds of the bank, which closed its doors January 21.

Brittle had been at liberty on bond of $25,000 since his arrest eight days after the bank closed. Twelve other indictments which had been returned against him, charging him with peculations from the bank totaling almost $20,000 more, were nolle prossed by Commonwealth's Attorney Albert V. Bryan, who recommended the six-year sentence.

Judge Frederick W. Coleman, of Fredericksburg, especially named by Gov. John G. Pollard to sit in the case, accepted the recommendation in announcing that Brittle had come forward voluntarily in turning over to the bank's directors his real estate holdings, approximating a substantial part of the losses, and that he had made restitution to the best of his ability. Judge Coleman took occasion to laud Brittle for striving to make amends.

The sentence imposed on Brittle makes him subject to service on the State convict road force. A release after four years, on good behavior, or a pardon after serving half the sentence are possible. After being sentenced Brittle was held in the Alexandria jail to await transfer to the State penitentiary.

The recently elected officers of Fitzgerald Council, No. 459, Knights of Columbus, will be installed tonight at 8 o'clock in the K. C. Hall, the ceremonies conducted by State Deputy Samuel L. D. conferred upon him on Saturday morning next, July 12, by the National University of Law of Washington, from which institution he was graduated 50 years ago. All of the members of the local bar association will attend the ceremonies, which organization also has plans on for a celebration at 10 o'clock that morning in the corporation courtroom to honor Mr. Caton.

City council will this afternoon, at a meeting to be held at 2 o'clock, take final action on the franchise for the electric power to be furnished the city for a period of 30 years. A number of minor matters will also come before the meeting.

Man, 77, Divorced From His Wife, 25

W. Frank Leonard Granted Decree at Easton, Md., in "Clipping Case."

Special to The Washington Post.

Easton, Md., July 8.—W. Frank Leonard, of Easton, aged 77, was granted an absolute divorce from his wife, Jean Schilling Leonard, 25, today by Chief Judge William H. Adkins, of the Circuit Court for Talbot County, sitting in equity.

Mr. Leonard was shown a clipping from a city paper, which gave an account of Jean Schilling, together with her picture, offering to marry any man with $5,000. The friend of Mr. Leonard, Lacey Butler, of Denton, testified he induced Miss Schilling to visit Mr. Leonard at his home in Easton on Sunday, January 6, and the next day they started for Baltimore.

When Chestertown was reached they stopped off and were married. Returning to Easton after driving through Baltimore, they spent the night and the next day at the home of Mr. Leonard. On January 9, Mrs. Leonard left for Baltimore, accusing Mr. Leonard of failing to provide a suitable home for her. Mrs. Leonard filed a suit for divorce in Baltimore, but when the case was called it was learned that Mr. Leonard had filed his suit here a day or two ahead of Mrs. Leonard. The court ruled that Easton had precedence and the case was tried here in April. Today the judge rendered his decision in favor of Mr. Leonard.

RIVER ROAD OPENED; RITCHIE IS SPEAKER

Bladensburg Event Hears of Plans to Relieve Flood Conditions.

KEY GIVEN TO EXECUTIVE

Definite steps toward relieving of flood conditions in Bladensburg are under consideration, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, said last night at exercises marking the opening of River road. The exercises were held under the auspices of the Greater Bladensburg District Citizens Association at St. Luke's Parish Hall, Bladensburg.

Gov. Ritchie told the large gathering that six weeks ago he conferred with the engineering department of the State Roads Commissino regarding a remedy for the floods which follow nearly every heavy rain in Bladensburg. He said that the situation is receiving serious study by the roads commission. The governor outlined the extensive road building program which is in progress under his administration.

He mentioned the 300th anniversary of the founding of Maryland which is to be celebrated in March, 1934, and urged cooperation with the celebration committee.

Among the others who spoke were State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, who presented the governor with a miniature elephane; former State Senator Oliver P. Metzerott, William P. McGruder, former mayor of Hyattsville; County Superintendent of Schools Nicholas Orem; Representative Stephen W. Gambrill, Brice Bowie, clerk to the county commissioners; Mrs. Mary W. Browning, county commissioner; Judge J. Chew Sheriff, judge of police court and member of the Democratic State central committee, and J. Enos Ray, chairman of the Democratic State central committee of Maryland.

Robert W. McCullough, chairman of the committee in charge of the exercises, presented Gov. Ritchie with a key, replica of the one George Washington used to unlock the White House.

Mine Head Admits Effect of Strike

Brock Workings Operating on 35 Per Cent Basis, Is Assertion.

Fairmont, W. Va., July 8 (A.P.).—H. V. Showalter, president of the Continental Coal Co., today said the Brock mine of the company, affected by a strike called last week, was working at 35 per cent of capacity today.

Showalter said a statement credited to F. E. Christopher, superintendent of the mine, in which Christopher was quoted as saying 200 men returned to work today, was "misleading." He explained that the 35 per cent basis was a more accurate estimate of the extent of the mine's operations.

The company's Sands mine, at Rivesville, was not operating, and Van A. Bittner, representative of the United Mine Workers of America, said the employes of the Catherine Coal Co. at the Hero mine, Lumberport, also had struck.

The Continental Coal Co. reduced wages on July 1.

Wedding Guests Arrive Four Months Too Late

Baltimore, July 8 (A.P.).—Four-score guests for the wedding of Gertrude Telowitz and Ralph J. Gordon, arrived at the Telowitz home too late for the ceremony.

Invitations were sent out last week, and the guests arrived last night. After the last one had entered the home, the bride-to-be broke the news that she was a bride-in-fact and had been for four months. After her mother had been revived from a faint, the story of the March 6 elopement was told.

600 PONIES LISTED IN WARRENTON SHOW

Annual Exposition Will Be One of Greatest in State History.

SEVERAL CUPS OFFERED

Special to The Washington Post.

Warrenton, Va., July 8.—With cooler weather prevailing and all signs pointing to continued dry cool weather, the ponies are rolling into Warrenton in vans for the eleventh annual pony show, which starts tomorrow morning at 9:30.

Over 600 entries feature this year's two-day exhibition. Numerous handsome trophies will be awarded the successful exhibitors Wednesday and Thursday.

The memorial cup for Robert E. Ferneyhough is the prize in the Corinthian class. Other handsome prizes include the Harry Plumb cup for the hunter championship for the best pony in the show which was won by Robert E. Ferneyhough's Sky High in 1929. The Blanche Ortman Challenge Cup for the grand championship is probably the most sought-after award in the entire show. Last year Miss Elizabeth Nesbit's Sportsman took it. It must be won three times by the same exhibitor.

It is given the pony winning the most points in the show. An unusually large crowd is expected to be on hand for both days with the banner crowd, as is always the case, coming on the last day.

Special to The Washington Post.

BROTHERS REQUEST MOVE TO NEW JAIL

CLOSER FOR FAMILIES

Defense counsel for Lawrence Leroy Brady and his brother, Herman Brady, filed a petition yesterday in the Rockville circuit court asking that the men be transferred from the Rockville to the Marlboro Jail, so that they might be nearer members of their families.

State's Attorney J. Frank Parran, of Prince Georges County, declared in a statement filed with the petition that the return of the prisoners to Marlboro would be satisfactory to him.

It is pointed out that the expense of keeping the brothers in the Rockville Jail is more for Prince Georges County than if they were held in the county's own jail. Circuit Judge Robert B. Peter said he would confer with Chief Judge Hammond Urner and Associate Judge John S. Newman and would announce their decision at once.

The Brady brothers, who were jointly indicted in Prince Georges County for the Seat Pleasant bombing last New Year's Day, have been in the Rockville Jail since last month. The case was later removed to Rockville on the request of defense counsel, Attorneys M. Hampton Magruder, Lansdale G. Sasscer and Frank Hall.

MOSSBURG ELECTED FIRE JUBILEE HEAD

Arlington-Fairfax Firemen Plan Annual Meeting Early in August.

POLLARD MAY ATTEND

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509 Clarendon, Va

John R. Mossburg, of the Arlington Volunteer Fire Department, was elected chairman of the annual convention and jubilee to be held early in August by the Arlington-Fairfax Counties Firemen's Association.

This action, taken at a meeting of the executive committee in Cherrydale, fills the vacancy caused by the recent death of C. Clayton Donaldson.

A motion was unanimously adopted instructing the committee to draft suitable resolutions in honor of the late Mr. Donaldson, who was the father of the relief fund. President Walter U. Varney appointed the following members as a special committee to draft the resolutions: Grover E. Payne, chairman; Randolph F. Koseter, and William D. Topley.

Chairman Mossburg announced that plans will be made to invite Gov. John G. Pollard as guest of honor at the convention and to review the parade that will be staged on convention day, August 13.

A unanimous vote of confidence was given Supervisor B. M. Hedrick by the Glencarlyn Citizens Association at a meeting held last night. The association went on record as deprecating the actions against Supervisor Hedrick and expressed the belief that a fuller examination of the facts involved in the present controversy would lead to his complete vindication.

Francis C. Stetson was elected president of the association. Other officers elected are Charles Hines, vice president, and Margaret Olcott, secretary.

The Cherrydale Council, No. 11, Daughters of America, will hold its monthly meeting in the Rucker Building at Clarendon Friday night. The council will have as its guests at this meeting State and national officers.

The Arlington County Monarch Club will hold its weekly luncheon meeting tomorrow at 12 o'clock at the Ashton Heights Woman's Clubhouse. All members are asked to attend, as plans for a week-end trip to Orkney Springs will be considered.

According to reports given out by General Chairman Milton E. Crutchley, of the Clarendon Firemen's Carnival, which closed yesterday, it was conceded to have been one of the most successful affairs the department has sponsored in many years. The complete financial report has not as yet been received. Much of the success, Mr. Crutchley said, was due to untiring efforts of members of the ladies' auxiliary, who were on hand each night.

The Arlington Rotary Club will hold its weekly meeting tomorrow at 12:30 o'clock at the Washington Golf & Country Club.

Meeting last night at the home of Robert N. Anderson, the Ball for Congress Club, recently organized in Clarendon Precinct, formulated its plans for an extensive campaign within the precinct.

President Anderson announced that committees will be appointed to complete plans for a thorough canvass of all voters in the area.

$36,000 BOND ISSUE IS VOTED BY COUNTY

Montgomery Commissioners Decide on Flotation to Finance Highway.

FINES RUNNING HEAVILY

The Montgomery County Commissioners yesterday authorized a $36,000 issue of bonds to defray the cost of construction of the Poolesville-Sycamore Landing road. The cost of the improvement will be assessed against the Poolesville District.

Bids for the improvement were advertised for last week. The section of road to be improved extends from the Poolesville-Dawsonville pike along the old Poolesville road to Sycamore Landing, a distance of approximately 4 miles. The road will be built of stone and will be surfaced with oil. Bids will be received by the county commissioners next Tuesday at noon.

The commissioners approved the permanent installation of the automatic traffic lights at Silver Spring, upon the recommendation of County Commissioner Lacy Shaw, in charge of the Silver Spring suburban district. The lights are situated at the intersection of Colesville pike, Georgia avenue and Sixteenth street extended and have been in operation on trial for 60 days. No action was taken on the Bethesda lights as Dr. Perry, in charge of that area, was not present at the meeting. The lights have been indorsed by the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce, however, and it is expected that they will be permanently installed.

Fines Run Heavily.

Fines in criminal cases totaled $2,117 and costs in civil cases $61 in the month of June, according to the monthly report of Police Judge Charles W. Woodward, Rockville Police Court magistrate, filed yesterday with the county commissioners.

The sum of $604 represents fines in motor vehicle cases and will be forwarded to the commissioner of motor vehicles in Baltimore in accordance with the law. The balance will be credited to the county.

Judge Woodward also transmitted a check for $1,423.49, which represents the proceeds of a sale of confiscated automobiles seized in liquor law violations held Saturday at Rockville.

Care of indigent sick of the county totaled $1,693.65 for the month of June, according to the statements of expenses approved by the commissioners and forwarded to the State comptroller. Georgetown Hospital receives $821 and Washington Sanitarium and Hospital the sum of $872.65.

School Ordered Closed.

Closing of the Ednor one-room school was ordered yesterday by the Montgomery County Board of Education. The pupils at the school will be transported by bus to the Sherwood School at Sandy Spring. The closing of the school was ordered after patrons of the school had petitioned the board to consolidate the school with the graded school at Sandy Spring in order that the pupils might have the advantage of the greater facilities offered by the larger school.

The board also announced the appointment of several new trustees to take the place of those who have resigned for various reasons, as follows:

Poolesville, Mrs. Robert Gray; Kings Valley, Elzie Cordell; Potomac, Earl Lechlider.

Takoma Park's new community center and recreation park in North Takoma Park is now open to the public, according to Roland Rogers, landscape architect for the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission, who has been in charge of the work of preparing the park for the public.

A fireplace has been provided near rustic benches and tables for the use of those picnic-minded and other recreation and picnic facilities are provided.

The park occupies a site of 3 acres, which were deeded to the planning commission for parkland by the town of Takoma Park and represents a valuable addition to Montgomery County's rapidly growing park system.

Weekly training under actual field conditions in preparation for the annual encampment of the Maryland National Guard is planned for the Transportation Platoon, Service Company, First Maryland National Guard Infantry, according to an announcement by First Lieut. Ward W. Caddington, in command of the platoon, which is a Silver Spring unit.

According to Lieut. Caddington, the platoon will drill every Saturday afternoon at Wheaton, where the animals are kept. A progressive scheme of instruction has been mapped out by Lieut. MYSTERY YET VEILS ATTACK ON FARMER

Doctor Admits Injury May Have Been Caused by Fall on Stone.

SEARCH YIELDS NAUGHT

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., July 8.—The identity of the men who attacked Clifton Borneman, 30-year-old farmer of Arnolds, Md., last Saturday morning remains as much a mystery as ever today, after police had completed another day on the case. The clew of a mysterious blond haired man supposed to have been seen near the scene has been abandoned.

The blond man, according to Glenn Noble, of the State police department, was not a bandit but one of the searching party which had been scouring the countryside for Borneman. He was not well acquainted in these parts, and asked his whereabouts after leaving the woods near where Borneman's prostrate form was found.

The victim showed such marked improvement today that he was brought to the Emergency Hospital to have an X-ray picture taken.

Borneman is said to have told his family a complete story of the affair. In it he remarked that there were four men in the case instead of three, as first told. He said three men accosted him while a fourth sat at the wheel of the machine with the motor running.

Members of the family state that he does not, however, recollect anything about the attack other than being stopped and seeing a blow coming.

Dr. J. O. Purvis, Borneman's physician, had an interview with Sheriff Michael F. Carter today. Dr. Purvis refused to reveal the nature of his conversation. Questioned as to whether Borneman might not have fallen on a stone or injured himself, Dr. Purvis said such would be possible although not probable. While refusing to make a direct statement, Sheriff Carter still seems inclined to stick to the belief that the sole intent of the attack was robbery.

County Offers Reward To Halt Holdup Wave

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., July 8.—Holdups and robberies have become so prevalent in Anne Arundel County lately that the board of commissioners today offered a reward of $150 for the arrest of the perpetrators.

This action was taken largely because of three such instances that have occurred in the Severena Park section during the last fortnight. Most recent of these was early this morning, when William H. Simpson, proprietor of a small store was aroused by the glare of a flashlight and a gun poked in his ribs. When Simpson attempted to reach for his own gun, the man, said to be a Negro, opened fire and a bullet nearly severed the index finger of Simpson's left hand.

REPORT SAYS SOUTH ATTRACTS INDUSTRY

11 STATES ARE STUDIED

Charlottesville, Va., July 8 (A.P.).—Southward moves industrialism, until its teeming center draws downward toward the Dixie outposts of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers.

This is the finding of the first sectional study completed by the Institute for Research in the Social Sciences at the University of Virginia. It is devoted to labor in the South, which it covers in all its connections.

Agriculture, still dominant below the Mason and Dixon line, has lost ground before the steady growth of manufacturing, the study revealed, but the most striking comparison was found with the country as a whole. During the 47 years from 1880 to 1927, the value of manufactured products for the entire Nation increased 1,170 per cent, but that for the eleven distinctly Southern States grew over 2,300 per cent, nearly twice as much.

40 Per Cent of Nation's Total.

In less than one-fourth the total number of States, in approximately one-fourth the country's area and with less than one-fourth of its population, the South is producing 10 per cent of the country's manufactured output. That, proportioned on the basis of number of States, area and population, would place its value at not far from 40 per cent of the Nation's total, the institute estimated.

The survey was conducted in the institute established at the university in 1926 by the Rockefeller Foundation, and deals with studies conducted in the States of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas. Separate chapters are devoted to the South's industrial revolution, its background for the worker, the cost of living and particular phases of the furniture, lumber and cotton textile industries.

The report was prepared by Prof. Abraham Berglund, Prof. George T. Starnes and Frank T. deVyver, all of whom are associated with the institute for research in the social sciences.

Back of the South's new development the investigators found the influence of the section's old traditions associated with a highly specialized type of agriculture. And while the new industrial development had made deep inroads into old industrial habits and changed the living conditions of large numbers of people in the South, it by no means transformed the South from an agricultural community into a manufacturing community.

Cheap Labor Factor.

Cheap labor, it was found, had had its effect in attracting industry southward, but the institute investigators were inclined to believe that the importance of the labor factor has been exaggerated. Natural resources, they said, were a more powerful influence. In the industries of lumbering, manufacture of cottonseed oil, petroleum refining, production of iron and steel and even the manufacture of cotton cloth, the rich, raw material resources of the South were regarded as compelling factors.

In 1927 there were twelve industries in the eleven Southern States, each of which had an output in excess of $100,000,000. Census figures showed that more than 56 per cent of the country's cotton manufacturing is being done in the South; 84 per cent of cottonseed products; 55 per cent of fertilizers; 40 per cent of lumber and lumber products; 27 per cent of refined petroluem; 53 per cent of turpentine and rosin; 46 per cent of cigars and cigarettes, and 12 per cent of the Nation's knit goods. In addition, the new industry of rayon had established itself in the South with the largest rayon mill in the world in Virginia.

The twelve manufacturing industries, each of which in 1927 had an output in the South of over $100,000,000, were as follows:

Cottons, $880,805,268; petroleum refining, $580,476,618; cigars and cigarettes, $563,784,310; lumber and timber products not elsewhere specified, $501,854,630; oil, cake and meal cotton seed, $233,050,130; cars and general shop construction and repairs for steam railroads, $208,772,542; knit goods, $142,823,882; flour and other grain mills, $130,833,235; lumber—planing mill products not made in planing mills connected with sawmills, $128,717,098; slaughtering and meat packing, $121,450,606; furniture, $109,961,637; fertilizers, $105,415,387.
